HOUSE GROUP VOTES CHANGE IN DRAFT BILL

Alteration Made in Provision To Force Industries to Cooperate with Defense.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3—Members of the house military committee said today they had approved an amendment to the military conscription bill to permit the government to take over, on a rental basis, industrial plants for production of defense materials.

The amendment, reported to have been accepted by a close vote, was a substitute for a senate provision which would authorize the government to condemn and take over and operate such plants.

Sponsored by Rep Smith (D-Conn.), the house committee's modification would authorize the government to place an order for defense supplies which a company would be required to fill.

If the concern refused the contract, the government would proceed to operate the plant, produce supplies and pay "fair and just" compensation or rental.

Debate Opens Today

The house opened debate today on the precedent-breaking question of peacetime conscription, with both friend and foe of the legislation in virtual agreement on what the decision would be on the final roll call.

A two-to-one vote victory was the forecast of Rep. May (D-Ky.), chairman of the house military committee, which prepared the modified version of the Burke-Wadsworth bill on which the house will act.

In the oratorical battle anticipated before the decisive vote is reached Friday or Saturday, the arguments for and against conscription were expected to duplicate the general tenor of those aired in the senate before it approved the Burke-Wadsworth measure after three intensive weeks of debate.

Points of Difference

The major clashes were looked for on those sections of the modified house bill which differ from the version passed by the senate.

The biggest difference is on the age limits fixed. The house bill would make all male citizens or prospective citizens from 21 through 44 subject to registration and liable for military service. An approximate total of 24,000,000 men thereby would be affected. The senate version would restrict operation of the draft to the 12,000,000 from 21 through 30.

Both houses also disagree on the maximum number of conscripts to be permitted in service at one time. The house bill figure is 1,000,000 whereas the senate voted for 900,000. A compromise agreement on this point, however, was not regarded as difficult.

Ohio Congressmen Voice Opposition to Draft Measure

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 — An overwhelming majority of Ohio's 24 representatives intend to follow the example set by the state's senators in voting against conscription.

The Ohioans registered their sentiments as the house prepared to take up the draft bill passed by the senate with a controversial amendment involving in effect compulsory service by industry as well as men for national defense.

Only one Buckeye house member—Dow W. Harter (D)—indorsed conscription, openly.

Rep. Michael Kirwan (D) said he would support the bill, but wants clergymen and ministerial students exempted.

Opposing conscription outright or contending that it should be undertaken only as a last resort after other means of raising an army had been tried and failed were these 15 members:

Hunter, Claypool, Secrest, Sweeney and Polk, Democrats; McGregor, Robert Jones, Hess, Secombe, Jenkins, Lewis, Bender, Vorys, Frederick Smith and Elston, Republicans.

Three Others Cool

Three members, Marshall, Mrs. Bolton and Clevenger, Republicans, are known to be cool toward the principle of conscription.

Representative Crosser (D) did not express himself. He voted against the World war draft.

Representatives Routzohn and Clarence Brown, Republicans, withheld comment pending house discussion of the measure.

Both Senator Donahey (D) and Senator Taft (R) were in the minority when the senate ap-

Nazi Soldiers To Guard Rumania Against Soviet

German Divisions Will Move Into New Russian Border on Sept. 15; Protests Against Transfer to Hungary Grow in Intensity in Transylvania.

By The Associated Press

BUCHAREST, Sept 3—German motorized divisions will take over on Sept. 15 protection of Rumania's south Bucovina border, newly formed by Rumania's cession of North Bucovina to Soviet Russia, informed sources said today.

This first line of defense against the possibility of any further Russian penetration in that area, they said, will be centered at Vatra Donei, with Rumania's own forces dropping back to form a second line.

The reported date for German forces to take over is two days after Hungarian occupation of northern Transylvania, ceded by Rumania under the axis dictate, is slated to be completed.

Italians To Aid

Both Rumanian government and semi-official German sources said strong Nazi forces would be supplemented by some Italians as a token of axis collaboration in the guarantees given King Carol's country in the Vienna arbitration last week.

Troubled conditions in northern Transylvania continued with clashes for possession of communications, railway stations and barracks reported in some places between armed Hungarian troops and Rumanian gendarmes and police.

From border towns came reports of sporadic armed clashes with many injuries and some deaths.

Warnings Defied

Plans for military resistance against transfer to Hungary continued in northern Transylvania despite stern warnings.

General Ian Antonescu has been made commaner-in-chief of Transylvania units.

It was uncertain, however, whether he would side with General Ion Dargolina, who sent word to Bucharest that he and his men would resist to the end although Rumanian troops are under orders to withdraw in preparation for Hungary's entrance into Transylvania Thursday.

A similar message came from General Mihal Corniciu, former minister of war.

At Cluj, ancient capital of Transylvania, the Rumanian peasant leader Julius Maniu, ardent opponent of the cession agreement dictated at Vienna last week by Germany and Italy, was reported to be rallying his followers for armed resistance.

At Brasov, thousands of persons knelt in the public square and took an oath pledging "death to the traitors" who acquiesced in the agreement.

RAF FIGHTERS REPEL NAZIS

Mass Attack on London Broken Up in Fierce Battle in Air.

By The Associated Press

British RAF fighters signalled their first success in the second year of the European war today by performing "victory roll" capers in the skies after routing a mass attack by hundreds of Nazi warplanes headed for London.

Apparently trounced in an hour-long battle over the Dover "Hell's Corner" region, the German aerial armanda jettisoned bombs and raced homeward with RAF fighters in pursuit.

Shortly afterward, however, the Nazi riders roared back to renew the assault in the same southeast coast vicinity and in northeast Scotland.

In London, war minister Anthony Eden told the British public it would be "foolish" to assume that, because of the approach of autumn, with its equinoctial storms, the menace of a Nazi invasion has passed.

"There is no shred of evidence to show that Hitler has abandoned his declared intention to seek to subdue this country by invasion," Eden declared.

Italy Reports Attacks

With the year-old war blazing on all fronts, Mussolini's high command reported that newly-formed squadrons of Italian "Picchiatelli" (little divers) attacked a fleet of British warships in the central Mediterranean, scoring hits on a battleship, an aircraft carrier, a cruiser and a destroyer.

An Italian communique acknowledged that long-range British RAF bombers, flying 1,600 miles round trip from their home bases, raided northern Italy, killing two persons and wounding 15 at Genoa.

Other RAF bombers pounded German bases near Boulogne on the Nazi-held coast of France, dropping salvos of bombs whose explosions reverberated like thunder clear across the channel.

Still other RAF bombing squadrons—carrying to the strafing of axis territory which the London air ministry announced has taken them 17,000,000 miles "or 700 times around the world" in the year-old struggle—raided military objectives in west and southwest Germany.

Say Victory Nearing

"The tide is already flowing toward victory," said the ultra-conservative London Times, while expert observers declared that if Britain's air defense holds fast until mid-September, Hitler will have little chance of attempting a land invasion before next spring.

Some Facts About Hobbies

In connection with Marion's annual Hobby Week observance, which will take place next week, The Star is publishing a series of interesting questions and answers on hobbies. The first of the series, prepared by members of the Marion Hobby club, appears on Page 4 of today's Star.

9 DRIVERS ARRESTED IN MARION DISTRICT

Police, State Patrolmen Active Over Labor Day.

Nine motorists were arrested by police and state highway patrolmen in Marion and nearby communities over the Labor-day week-end.

Donald Bumgariner, 20, of near Radnor was arrested by police on a reckless driving charge. He posted bond to appear in court this afternoon. Officers said Bumgartner was driving a car without lights on West Center street and several other streets in the southwest section of the city about 4 a. m. today and made left turns without watching for approaching traffic.

Roland F. Donahue, 21, of Detroit, Mich., was arrested by the Marion state patrol south of Marion yesterday afternoon on a charge of permitting a friend to drive his car without a driver's license. He was released under $5 bond which was declared forfeited when he failed to appear in municipal court this morning.

Clabe Brown, 27, of Akron was arrested by the state patrol at Cardington yesterday on a charge of driving an overloaded truck hauling rubber. He pleaded guilty before Mayor Frank Aliga of Cardington and was fined $25 and costs. The patrol reported the truck was one ton over-weight.

Three motorists were hailed into court by the state patrol at Bucyrus. They are: Paul Detemeyer, 23, of Lima, arrested Saturday night on a reckless driving charge after allegedly cutting in and out of traffic north of Bucyrus and crowding a truck off the highway; Merlin Starner, 18, of near Chatfield, charged with failing to stop for a stop light in Bucyrus Saturday night; and Frank H. Sonday, 26, of Bucyrus, charged with driving without lights in Bucyrus Saturday night. All three pleaded guilty before Justice-of-the-Peace O. K. Bender of Bucyrus. Deitemeyer and Sonday were fined $10 and costs each and Starner was fined $3.

The Marion patrol also arrested three motorists near Delaware on reckless driving charges yesterday, Paul J. Rogers, 18, and Charles McNeely, 25, both of Columbus and Harry R. McDonald, 51, of Royal Oak, Mich. All pleaded guilty before Justice-of-the-Peace John J. Schweitzer in Delaware and were fined $5 and costs each.

36 CONVICTS SHOOT GUARD TO FLEE PEN

Posse Rounds Up Some in Hunt Over Area in Arkansas and Louisiana.

By The Associated Press

CUMMINS PRISON FARM, ARK., Sept. 3—Grim posses in widely separated sections of Arkansas and Louisana pressed a hot chase today for scattered members of a band of 36 convicts who killed a guard and wounded another in a Labor day escape from the Arkansas penitentiary here.

Two of the escapees, both ringleaders, were captured after a 30-minute gun battle at Garland City in extreme southwestern Arkansas early today. No one was injured.

A band of five armed convicts, cornered along a highway near Columbia, La., at about the same time, killed Frank Gartman, a posseman, while using three youthful hostages as shields.

The convicts, surrounded in a clump of trees two miles northeast of Columbia, still had with them the two girls and a boy who were abducted yesterday when the men took their automobile at Rayville, La.

Gartman, Columbia automobile dealer, was shot and killed when, as a citizen-deputy, he approached the parked automobile of the convicts shortly after midnight.

The abducted youths are Anna Laura Diamond, daughter of the Rayville marshal, Vonclele Williams and Jerry Harnigle, all about 16 or 17 years old.

Most of the convicts were believed on foot in the dense woods and bottomlands surrounding this sprawling prison camp where the merit system, using trusty convicts for armed guards, has long been in force.

Trusty Guards Lead Break

The break, biggest in Arkansas penal history, was led by four of these prison guards and four prisoners. It started in a pea field, far from the main prison camp, while a picking crew of 134 rank men and 10 guards relaxed after the noon meal.

The four renegade trusties began disarming their fellow guards quietly, but violence broke out when Frank Conley, 34, a rank man serving 21 years for robbery and kidnaping, attacked Troy Wade, a shotgun armed guard, with a knife.

When Claude Martin, 41, another guard, started to lift his rifle, Conley seized Wade's gun and shot Martin with both barrels, prison authorities said.

As Martin fell face downward, they added, Percy Loftin, 25, a rifle-armed guard serving life plus 52 years for murder, kidnaping and robbery, shot Martin in the back. He died instantly. Wade was only slightly wounded by the knife attack.

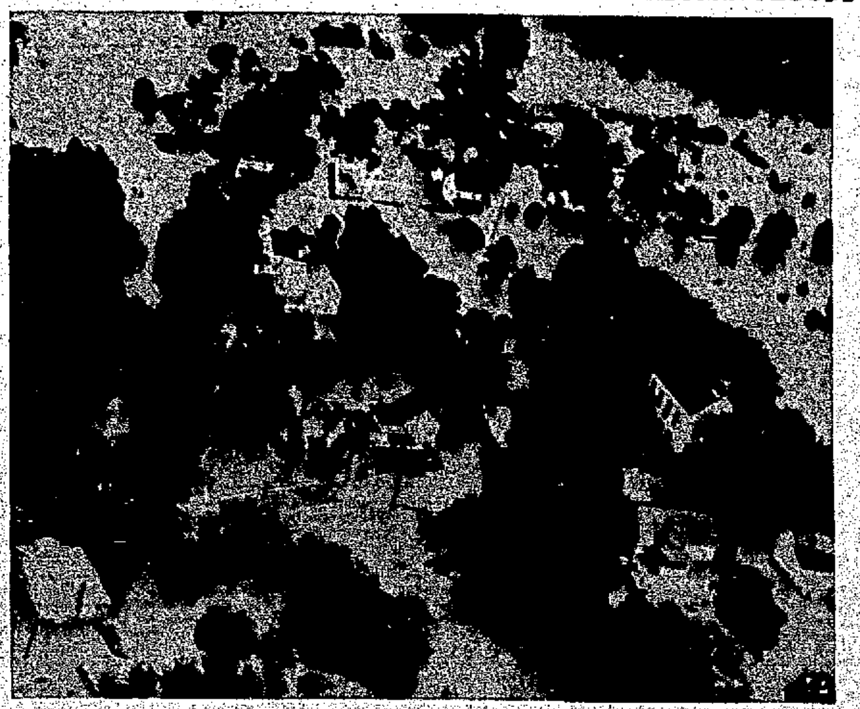
Others Surrender Guns

The other six guards then surrendered their weapons. The eight ringleaders rode away on horseback and the others fled on foot.

Two were captured in the fight at Garland City. Three other convicts with them escaped on foot into the Red river bottoms of Lafayette county.

This group commandeered four automobiles in relay-fashion during its flight and had two Montrose, Ark., farmers, in custody when they ran into four officers guarding the Garland City bridge. The farmers, Floyd Harrison, 41, and Leon Boney, 17, were liberated by the officers.

HUNDREDS OF FAMILIES DRIVEN FROM HOMES BY EASTERN FLOODS



At least five persons were dead, hundreds of families were homeless, more than a score were injured and crop and property damage was estimated in the millions as the result of destructive floods in southwestern New Jersey and Delaware. Shown in this Associated Press Photo is an airview of Lumberton, N. J., where floodwaters flowed through the entire village.

Renewal of 3-Mill Levy Put on Ballot by School Board

Resolution States Need for Continuing Tax for 5 More Years; Vote Nov. 5.

Action seeking continuation of the present three-mill levy for current operating expenses of the Marion public schools was taken yesterday afternoon at a monthly meeting of the board of education with Supt. E. E. Holt at the administration building.

A resolution setting forth the need for the levy for a five year period from 1940 through 1944 and declaring funds raised within the 10-mill levy insufficient to meet current operating expenses, was adopted unanimously. The vote will be at the regular election on Nov. 5.

This will be the third time the three-mill levy has been placed before the voters. It passed by comfortable majorities when it was first sought in 1930 and again in 1935.

The levy raises approximately $100,000 a year, by a tax of 30 cents for each $100 valuation of property, records of Clerk D. J. Torrance show. All the money goes to operate the schools.

Without the additional tax funds Marion public schools could not operate the full nine months of the school year, officials said.

State Money Involved

Thousands of dollars for the schools from the state school foundation fund also are involved, the clerk pointed out, since state aid is given on a basis of daily per pupil attendance.

Discussing the need for continuation of the levy, Mr. Torrance said he was not prepared to state officially as yet how much the school year would be shortened if it should fail to pass.

However, to show the extent of state aid funds involved, he calculated figures on a seven-month school year, which would mean a loss of approximately $45,000 in funds from the state.

An educational program to place the need for the continuation of the levy before the Marion school district voters will be discussed in the near future by the board at either a called meeting or an executive session.

Superintendent Holt advised the board that the Marion Parent-Teacher association council already has pledged its full support to any program that may be devised.

All the board members and the superintendent expressed confidence in the success of the levy and were unanimously in favor of formulating an educational pro-

Marion Co. Couple on Wedding Trip in Own Airplane

Probably the first Marion county couple to leave Marion airport in their own plane for a honeymoon flight is Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Miller of the Miller Farms on the Delaware road.

The bride is the former Miss Caroline Beckel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Beckel of Waldo and the bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Miller of the Delaware road.

Their marriage was solemnized Sunday morning at 7:30 o'clock in the Evangelical and Reformed church at Waldo. The single ring service was read by the pastor, Rev. Reginald L. Barr. The bride wore a moss green wool costume suit with brown accessories, and a corsage of roses.

A wedding breakfast was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tong of the Delaware road, brother-in-law and sister of the bridegroom.

After the breakfast, Mr. Miller and his bride drove to the Marion airport and boarded Mr. Miller's privately owned plane, a low wing Aeronca two-place model, and soared away on a honeymoon along the skyways.

Early this morning relatives received telegrams from St. Louis, Mo. The message did not say whether the couple would continue westward or fly homeward.

Mr. Miller, a graduate of Pleasant Township High school in 1928, has been interested in aviation for years and has owned his own plane for several years. He holds a private pilot's license. He is a member of the Marion Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Aviation Boosters club. His bride is a graduate of Waldo High school, class of '32.

OPERA LEADER DIES

FERRARA, Italy, Sept. 3—Giulio Gatti-Casazza, 71, general manager of the New York Metropolitan opera from 1908 to 1935, died here last night.

Marion's Nail Keg Derby Winner and Queen of Playgrounds Crowned

Dick Higdon, 14, Captures Race Event; Shirley Palmer, 13, Victorious in Park Contest.

The 1940 nail keg derby winner and a queen of playgrounds were crowned Monday during Marion's annual playground program. The day's activities, sponsored by the Marion county commissioners and under the supervision of WPA recreation leaders, featured the derby in the morning and an afternoon parade through the main streets of Marion to Lincoln park where prizes were awarded winners of the parade and of special events at the park.

Dick Higdon of 701 Girard avenue was winner in a field of 20 drivers in the nail keg derby on the Vine street hill. The 14 year-old seventh grade pupil at Central Junior High school drove a small grey racer, made of discarded galvanized steel, worth only 14c. He was presented a trophy by Community Center.

After parading through the downtown section, the parade containing floats and their queens from the various playgrounds in the city, moved to Lincoln park where awards were made and special contests were held.

First place for the best decorated among the eight floats competing was awarded to Marion County Children's home float which represented a playground group.

Shirley Palmer of 695 South Prospect, as Miss McKinley Park was judged queen of Marion playgrounds. She is 13 years old and is in the eighth grade at Central Junior High school.

The other queens and the playgrounds they represented are as follows: Jean Freese, Community Center; Betty Cook, Roosevelt park; Edna Rose Verity, Children's Home; Mary Murphy, Oak Grove; Jo Ann Garvin, Garfield park; Genevieve Dille, Lincoln

3 CAUGHT IN BREAK-IN HERE

Police Nab Trio Before Burglary at Palace Theater Is Discovered.

Police did a speedy job of solving a break-in at the Palace theater early yesterday. In fact they had three Lima Negroes charged with the burglary in jail before the breakin was discovered.

The burglary, involving the theft of $28, two guns and considerable damage to the theater building, was discovered by employes about 7 a. m. and when it was reported at the police station officers decided they already were holding three likely suspects. Chief Marks said the men admitted complicity in the theft during questioning yesterday and he reported that charges will be filed this afternoon against the trio, Melvin Halcock, 23, Wister Morning, 27, and Calvin Burgen, 20.

Police reported that entrance to the theater was gained by breaking a stage door at the east side of the building and that doors also were broken leading into the projection room above the theater balcony, the manager's office on the first floor and a small closet in the manager's office.

The loot included the $28, a rifle and a target pistol, all taken from the projection room and several small articles including a fountain pen and pencil set taken from the manager's office. An attempt also was made to force open a safe in the manager's office but the prowlers succeeded only in hammering off part of the locking device.

Apparently while the burglary was in progress, Capt. Ora DeWees and Patrolman Vic Gillis, who

ST. MARY AND RURAL SCHOOLS OPEN TODAY

Summer Vacation Ends for Many in County.

The Labor day holiday brought to a close the 1940 summer vacation period and marked the beginning of school activities for thousands of school pupils in both the city and county.

Approximately 3,000 children in the county's rural and centralized schools treked out to school for the assignment of classes and classroom work.

At St. Mary parochial school children of the grades enrolled and received class assignments this morning. Students enrolled in the high school studies will be registered and receive class assignments Wednesday and beginners will be enrolled on Thursday morning. Classes will begin next Monday.

The city schools will open next Monday morning.

Full day sessions were held in practically all the county schools, although some schools scheduled only half day periods for registration and class assignment.

All schools were opened today marking the first time in several years that some of the county schools have not held sessions on Labor day.

WHEAT PRICES RALLY SHARPLY AT CLOSE

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Sept. 3—Wheat futures prices rallied sharply in the closing minutes of trading today to around the best levels in a month after earlier setbacks had forced quotations to below Saturday's final figures. The late advance was aided by the strong undertone at Minneapolis where mill buying was reported and by a fair demand for September contracts. Corn also was firm.

Wheat closed at the day's top, ¾-1 cent higher than Saturday, September 74-74⅛, December 76½-⅝; corn was ¼ lower to ⅞ higher, September 62¼-⅜, December 58-58⅛, and oats were ⅜-⅞ cents higher.

Boston Wool

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Sept. 3—Early trading on wools in Boston today was rather light. Buyers were thought to be waiting for the awards of contracts on government orders before making further commitments on raw wools. Over the week-end and holiday a fair weight of fine fleece wool for shipment direct from the country was reported to have been sold. Prices ranged mostly 30-32 cents, in the grease, delivered, or 82-87 cents, scoured basis, for country packed fine bright fleeces in lots containing staple and French combing lengths.

Liquids are forced from a spout on top of a new vacuum jug by squeezing a rubber bulb.

STOCKS FIND ROUGH TRAIL

Advance Hampered After Early Rise Led by Steel Shares.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Sept. 3—The recovery trail turned a bit rough in today's stock market after steels had led a mild early push.

Dealing were fastest and prices best in the forenoon. There were subsequent slow-downs and, near the fourth hour, gains running to a point or so were substantially reduced or transformed into fractional declines.

Buying here and there was attributed to the belief of some the British were giving the Nazis more than Hitler had bargained for.

Attracting support were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Wright Aeronautical, Dow Chemical, Great Northern, American Woolen preferred and International Paper preferred.

Inclined to waver occasionally were Bethlehem, International Nickel, Westinghouse and Montgomery Ward.

Cheering to commission house optimists was the estimate of the Standard Statistics Co. that aggregate payrolls for factory workers in August were 14 per cent above July, while national purchasing power (excluding the farmers) rose for the third successive month. As compared with July, 1939, agricultural buying power was up 10 per cent.

Brush - Moore To Refinance Capital Issues

Shareholders Advised of Plans for Exchange to New Preferred.

The Brush-Moore Newspapers, Inc. today announced a plan for refunding its capital obligations. The present 5% bonds of the company, publicly owned in the amount of approximately $2,000,000, will be refunded by a 4¼% bank loan payable in installments during 15 years.

The present 7% first and second preferred shares, amounting to $2,100,000, will be replaced by a single 6% preferred share issue in the amount of $2,000,000. The new 6% preferred shares will be offered to the present preferred shareholders and bondholders in exchange for their present securities. The shareholders will be asked to approve the plan at a meeting to be held Tuesday, Sept. 24, 1940 at 2 p. m. at the company's main office in Canton, O.

The company owns and publishes the only daily newspapers in their respective Ohio fields, The Canton Repository, The Salem News, The East Liverpool Review, The Steubenville Herald-Star, The Marion Star, The Portsmouth Times, and in Maryland, The Salisbury Times. The company also owns the Salem, O. Label Co. and has a half interest in the Ironton, O. Tribune. In the field of radio it owns the Ohio Broadcasting Co., operating station WHBC at Canton and has a half interest in the Vee Bee Corporation, operating station WPAY at Portsmouth.

Louis H. Brush of Salem is president of the company, Roy D. Moore of Canton is vice president and general manager and William H. Vodrey of East Liverpool is secretary-treasurer and general counsel.

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

NOT THE least interesting parts of Dr. Hans Zinsner's recent book of reminiscences are the accounts of his journeys to far corners of the earth looking for reservoirs of almost extinct diseases. Where now is yellow fever? Cholera? Typhus fever? Plague? I have been in practice for over thirty years and never saw a case of any of these diseases. That would hold true, I venture to say for ninety-nine per cent of the doctors in North America. Yet once each one of these pestilences was as familiar to a family doctor as the measles.

Typhus fever, which used to be called jail fever, is an old offender which also has almost disappeared. A few years ago Doctor Brill, of New York, described a peculiar febrile condition that had been occurring in his wards. The patients had a fever and broke out in spots. The condition was so mysterious that a new name had to be coined for it. It was called Brill's disease. But it turned out to be really typhus fever, a disease once as familiar as pneumonia. Where had it been all this time? We know it is carried by lice and fleas.

There is a lesson here which applies to typhoid fever. Once at this time of year it was among the commonest of diseases. Now it has almost disappeared. But our knowledge of how diseases sleep, ready to break out again, should teach us that the precautions against typhoid should not be neglected

Yet it has not entirely disappeared. The death rate from typhoid fever in 1939 in the United States was the lowest on record—but there were 239 cases.

Fourteen cities in the United States have had no deaths from typhoid fever for the years 1938 and 1939. It is a roll of honor and should be recorded—the cities are Bridgeport, Cambridge, Elizabeth, Fall River, Fort Wayne, Kansas City, Kansas; Lowell, Lynn, Milwaukee, New Bedford, Salt Lake City, South Bend, Utica and Wichita.

This result has been gained, of course, largely through public health supervision of water, milk and washed foods. But individual immunization by typhoid vaccination is still important.

Tim Tyler

In order to maintain continuity in "Thimble Theater," "Tillie the Toiler" and "Tim Tyler" both Monday and today's strips appear today. To provide space, "Polly and Her Pals," "Bringing Up Father," and "Annie Rooney" are omitted. Publication of the three will be resumed tomorrow. Double use of the strips is necessitated by the Labor Day holiday when no Star was published.

MEMORY OF THE MOON

YESTERDAY: On her return Constance finds that her family has published reports that the ranch will be sold and has received credit. They are entertaining lavishly. Constance, keeping her arrival secret, is nabbed by detectives

CHAPTER 15

Appeal to John

THE French doors opened from the solarium and John Raskthorne stepped out, intent upon lighting a cigar.

"John!"

Raskthorne wheeled — "Constance...Conchita what are you ...take your hands off that girl," he snapped at the detective.

Constance, released, fled into the security of John's arms. "Will you tell these i-idiots that I am a Cabrillo? And John, make them keep still; I don't want the folks to know I'm home until after the party."

The idiots didn't need to be told anything, they had started fading into the darkness even before John bought their silence with bills; and Constance leaned for a few moments against John's shoulder, then straightened.

"I'm sorry," she apologized. "I ...they frightened me and I'm tired, I couldn't sleep on the plane, and I guess I forgot to have any dinner."

John patted her shoulder. "Wait until I find my 'coat."

Five minutes later, Constance's little coupe, with Raskthorne at the wheel, swung out of the tradesmen's entrance.

Constance sat back watching his hands on the wheel; watching his face, reliving her feeling of restful security as she leaned against his shoulder, wondering at her feeling for John.

I'm taking you to one of my pet hide-outs," John offered. "They'll give us a steak two inches thick."

Constance closed her eyes to shut out the vision of a little waterfront cafe and a dark-eyed man threading his way between tables, of a voice saying: "Hi', Michael."

John's "pet" was unpretentious. They went through a side door to be conducted to a private booth where curtains were immediately drawn.

"Now tell me all about it," ordered John, when the obsequious waiter had disappeared.

"Oh, John...it's wonderful! El Cabrillo, I mean. I can't give it up. It's like part of me, my blood and my flesh and my bones."

And then the words tumbled out. The waiter brought smoking platters but still Constance talked and when John found she wouldn't stop, he took her knife and fork, cut small sections of the steak and held them to her lips.

"Oh, John," she sighed, "you are good to me. You do take care of me."

"Some day," he threatened

Constance looked at him and saw him as other women must see him. A stalwart, handsome man, barely thirty but seasoned by the tragic passing of his parents, the worry over a madly-marrying younger sister, and by the cares of the vast estate he had inherited and which he handled alone and with wisdom.

"John," she asked impulsively, "what do you see in me that makes you say some day? Why do you wait?"

The light gray eyes in their surprising frame of jet lashes widened. "Conchita," he confessed, "I've asked myself that question a thousand times. And then I go back to our first meeting; do you remember that meeting, Chita?"

She remembered. But had six years passed since that night when she, awaiting the escort her mother hadd arranged to accompany her to the Charity Ball, had seen her little sister in stolen clothes flash in front of her; announce that she was Miss Cabrillo, and whisk off with the waiting man?"

Father, Brother, Counselor

She had "whisked" only as far as the elevators, then the escort had returned. "Now that the child has retired, Miss Cabrillo, shall we go on?" John Raskthorne had asked.

And to her query: "How did you know?" He had replied. "When your mother telephoned she was too ill to accompany you, father told me to look for the girl with the most beautiful eyes in the world."

It had been balm to the eighteen-year-old heart of Constance, just as other rescues, since that time had soothed her heart and her pride

It had been John who had helped them move from hotel to apartment, apartment to hotel, hotel to house. John who had taken the place of father, brother, counselor.

"I thought then," said John, handing Constance her cup of hot milk/ "that you'd need someone to help you cope with your family. I elected myself."

"John, were you coping with Donna when the detectives started coping with me?"

"Yes," he admitted. "To be frank, I was giving her merry hades for throwing this party."

"Then you do agree something must be done to check them?"

"Unquestionably."

"John, then then will you help me raise the money I will need to make El Cabrillo a modern, paying ranch?"

Because John Raskthorne was not a man to make promises he could not fulfill, or so Constance thought, he did not commit himself. They drove to a secluded bank and watched the river wind its way between jeweled shores, and Constance talked. She told of Mrs MacKelvey and her success; of the railroad; of the history of Old Michael Mahoney and of Peter Taylor, senior.

Not until she had slipped into the house with no one yet aware of her return, did she question her failure to speak of Pedro.

John had said he would see her at his office at three o'clock and they would discuss business in a business setting. Constance crept wearily to bed with assurance that somehow John would manage.

She'd stay away from the family until after that business conference That wouldn't be difficult. They would sleep until noon, then meet in negligee and lounging pajamas to have brunch together and discuss the previous evening at their leisure.

Constance dresed for the conference carefully. A frock of dull green, its only ornament a lobular pendant at the trim collar, shoes of the same shade and a Robin Hood hat with a gay scarlet feather. Her fur cape was cut down from a discarded coat of Donna's, though no one seeing her swing down the avenue would have thought it.

"Jaunty but business-like," she decided, looking into every shop window for reassurance as she made her way to John's office building.

An impersonal office boy turned her over to an impersonal secretary, who took her in to confront an impersonal John Raskthorne.

She sat in the indicated chair, waited a moment to acclimate herself to the change in the man since the previous evening, then spoke' "As I said last night, I need fifty thousand dollars"

"What security have you to offer?" asked Mr Raskthorne.

"None," admitted Constance frankly. "However, I will give my bond to the effect that should I fail to make a success of El Cabrillo, I will agree to the sale of it"

Fighting For A Chance

Raskthorne fingered a paper knife for a moment, then looked directly at Constance "The only offer ever made for El Cabrillo stands at fifty thousand. How would you propose to pay your interest? And should you fail, how would you pay the other members of the family their share of the ranch and still be able to repay the loan?"

In her eagerness Constance moved closer. "But after the railroad goes through the property; and after I have converted it to a dairy ranch and infused it with fresh capital, it will be worth more than fifty thousand."

A little smile played around Raskthorne's lips. "Have you computed the interest?" he inquired.

"Naturally. It is less than half the present profit on El Cabrillo."

"And you would expect the other members of the family to reduce their expenses to half of what they are now enjoying?"

Constance laughed. "Not my family. I'd set aside their present portion at the very beginning."

"Conchita," John dropped his business barrier. "On what do you base your belief that El Cabrillo could be sold for more than the present offer, say, after a period of three years?"

Constance relaxed. "That's simple," she told him. "El Cabrillo is the last long stretch of coastline in that section. There are fifty miles of it. Suppose, in an extremity, we should cut that into mile wide sections and sell it for summer homes. We could command and receive much more than a thousand for each section and wouldn't be touching the ranch proper. The ranch has no need of the coast-line as long as it retains enough for right of way to the highway.

Raskthorne looked at Constance, then looked away quickly, drew a pad to him and began jotting down figures.

"Suppose," he said, "I were to offer you fifty thousand for the ranch, with the proviso that upon ownership I would divide the coast into summer tracts and give you Cabrillos fifty per cent of the profit?"

"No, no, John!" Constance jumped up "Don't you see? I'm fighting for the chance to hold El Cabrillo as it is. Cutting it up would be like.. like carving bits of a body I loved.

"Why, John, even the Taylors wouldn't consider that!"

They wouldn't, she knew and for the first time realized that they loved the place as she did. It wasn't stewardship that had caused them to keep it as they had, but a driving urge to preserve something beautiful in its entirety.

She hated them for this, as a woman might hate another woman, for finding in her man the same qualities she loved.

Raskthorne tapped his pencil on the desk. "Wonder why no one else as thought of the ranch as an investment," he mused.

"They couldn't," explained Constance. "You know the terms of father's will We can't sell less than the whole; and no real estate firm, or individual, would buy two thousands acres to sell less than half of it."

* * *

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Backed To Win

"LOOK!" Constance drew a rough map of the ranch "This section would be of value to a real estate investor; this a total loss. And the man who saw the place as a ranch wouldn't be interested in cutting the extra land into a vacation tract. The natives have no use for summer people."

Raskthorne stood up, walked to the window, then back to his desk and shook his head. "Constance, no one would lend you money to carry on such a venture, with no security but your word. You're not even full owner."

Constance gathered her purse and gloves together. "I know it seems a wild scheme, John, but I believe in it. I came to you first because thought you knew more about the value of El Cabrillo than another would. However, I still have an ace up my sleeve, so goodby, and thank you for giving me so much time—"

"Chita!" John stopped her before she reached the door. "Listen, dear, what makes you think you, a twenty-four-year-old girl, can run a dairy farm? I doubt if you could tell a Brahmin from a Holstein"

Constance gave him a gamin grin. "If a Brahmin can produce as much milk as a Holstein, I'll buy a hear of them."

"A Brahmin," pronounced John eruditely, "is the camel of the beef family; a bison-headed steer with a hump on his back"

"Imagine you knowing that," breathed Constance in mock awe, and started again for the door.

"Chita," he was holding her by the arms now, "dear, give up the ranch. Marry me, today, tomorrow... next week. I'll take care of the family—"

Constance jerked away, cheeks scarlet "The Charge-it Cabrillos," she said bitterly. "Only then they would be charging it to my husband No, John! And I won't marry you or any other man until we Cabrillos can stand on our own"

"So that's it!"

At the tender triumph in his voice, Constance looked back

"Come back and sit down." John seemed jubilant over something "Come on, here in this chair, close to mine. Constance .. I'm going to back you. I am going to lend you the fifty thousand I'm going to bargain with you. If you will give me your word, and a written promise to one or two provisos, I'll back you to win."

So sudden was the change in John Raskthorne's manner, that Constance found herself seated before she fully realized what had occurred.

Still bitter over his light acceptance of her family as an obligation attendant upon anyone marrying her, and piqued at his assumption that she would fail with El Cabrillo because she was a girl, and a young one, she waited.

And as she waited her resentment faded. This John was new to her. She'd never before seen him against his business background. For a moment she let fancy picture her as his wife, coming up, perhaps to meet him for luncheon; her pride in this man with the silver band about his head which matched his business tweeds of silver gray; almost, she might say, matched his eyes of gray with their silver toning.

"Constance, tell me how you arrived at the figure of fifty thousand?"

She was ready. She drew a typewritten sheet from her bag. "The Taylors planned to borrow twenty thousand. They believed it would take three years to restock the ranch and start it running at a profit. I would have to hire an expert dairyman. I found, through Mrs. MacKelvey, that there was one available at four thousand a year—"

"Your dairymen come high," interposed Raskthorne.

Personal Loan

And now Constance could give John a superior smile. "Do you realize this man must know not only how to buy dairy stock, but how to buy feed; which food combination is right for what breed? And he must know how to till and plant and harvest the acres so that all the food need not be purchased? And he must know how to rebuild stables, install machinery, handle men, control the marketing, maintain accounts—"

"Wait a minute," begged John, laughing at his defeat. "Four thousand isn't too much for such a superman. You are counting on paying him out of the loan for three years, that is twelve thousand dollars. Say it would take twenty thousand to convert the ranch into a dairy farm, you still have twelve thousand—"

"Oh no, the family have been receiving nearly that much from the ranch, and I must figure on paying Peter Taylor's salary if he decides to stay on. I can't fire him you know."

Raskthorne nodded. "Conchita, with your brains and my money, we can't lose. Now, I'll be frank with you. After I listened to you last night, I decided to talk to Judge Franck. Reached him by telephone this morning and pledged him to secrecy. I had an idea you would talk me into this and I'm not a man to throw money away to satisfy the whim of even the woman I love.

"He believes in you He feels you can make a success of the ranch if you will take the advice of experienced people"

"But John," Constance's eyes were bright with tears of joy, "don't you see, dear, that is what I am planning to do. I know my limitations, but I think I'm smart enough to hire men who have none."

John nodded at her soberly.

"And you will help me with the bank?" she asked eagerly.

"No. Give me a month and I'll make this a personal loan."

Constance jumped up and stared at him, doubt in her eyes. "I'd rather not have personal loans.. John, why are you doing that?"

Raskthorne was beside her. "Because I love you, Conchita. And because I'm beginning to understand you and admire you even more than I did before.

"But mostly because I know I have a rival and I'm going to fight for you, against him, in my own way—"

"A ...a rival?" faltered Constance

"El Cabrillo. You've made the ranch an entity, given it a body and a soul

"To me it's as though it were another man, a profligate rascal, romantic, inconsistent, a veritable Don Juan.

"I can't win you until you've found it out for what it is until you've seen for yourself that it has a treacherous heart."

Constance listened, half frightened because his words were translated in her heart. John was not speaking of El Cabrillo rancho, he was speaking of Pedro, describing him: Pedro the inconsistent, romantic Don Juan.

'Girl In Love'

"You're like a young girl in love for the first time," John went on, "no one can tell you you're wasting your love, you're going to have to learn that yourself."

"But John?" she smiled up at him, wondering if he knew why her cheeks were suddenly flushed, wondering if he could hear the thick beat of her heart. "Suppose, while I was wasting my love, I . .I married the rascal; lost the investment."

"That is where the Joker comes in," John answered smoothly. "I don't intend running any risks. I'm going to protect you from yourself.

"Here is my proposition.

They sat down and Constance remembered another conference. Here again she was facing a shrewd man, only this man's eyes were suddenly iced with a hard, silver sheen.

"Upon receipt of the loan, you will agree, in writing that, if you have not shown a small margin of profit the last year, you will return here to place the property in my hands for sale, your legal consent included

"And you will agree to marry no man, other than John Raskthorne, until the fifty thousand has been repaid with interest. Marriage to any other will give me the right to call in the loan without notice."

Constance thought for a moment, then thrust out her hands, eyes starry.

"That's easy," she assured him. It was. She had no intention of marrying any man but John. And, if she failed with the ranch, as she had no intention of failing, there was no one whom she could trust to handle it to a better advantage than Raskthorne

John gripped her hand, then bent down for a quick kiss. "Now we're going home to break the news to the family"

"Oh," moaned Constance. Of course they had to be faced, only —"John, you don't have to shoulder that," she protested.

"I'm just getting into practice," he told her grimly, "I sent word for them to be ready for us at five o'clock."

Constance found nothing heartening in the first swirl of the season's snow which met them at the door of the building All of the buoyancy she had felt in winning John over to her support, fled, all of her indignation at the family's extravagance, melted

She allowed John to hold her arm tightly, even leaned on him a little as they made their way to the cab he had called Lamson's face was dour when he opened the door to them. Mrs. Cabrillo would see them in the petite salon.

Constance swallowed with difficulty. Her mother was an unconscious psychologist. No one could be altogether ruthless in that Dresden china room; no one cruel to the little golden-haired shepherdess who awaited them.

Constance felt as an alien might feel stepping into a strange land Mrs Cabrillo, in egg-shell satin negligee foaming with lace, sat in a deep chair of coral pink, flanked on one side by Donna, on the other by Don.

They presented a picture complete, and she was an observer standing outside their gilded frame. She felt it keenly, but it aroused no antagonism, only a vague wistfulness.

For a moment Mrs. Cabrillo's eyes rested hopefully on John. Constance knew what was in her mind, She was wanting John to say that Constance had consented to their marriage.

U. S. STILL SHORT OF SKILLED CRAFTSMEN

Training Program Falls Short, Trade Magazine Says.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Sept. 3 — The magazine "Steel" says a survey of the nation's skilled manpower shows the defense labor training program has not produced an adequate supply. Best estimates of the number of additional skilled workers needed by the end of this year range from 75,000 to more than 1,250,000, the magazine estimated.

As of Aug. 31, "Steel" estimated 90,000 trainees had enrolled in training courses in public vocational schools. Twenty thousand have been placed in jobs.

The magazine says the American Society of Tool Engineers has concluded a survey which indicates 110,800 tool engineers, 403,800 tool and die-makers and 741,000 skilled mechanics are needed immediately or for expansions definitely planned during the remainder of the year. To take care of definitely planned expansions the following additional men would be needed: 78 208 tool engineers; 332,160 skilled mechanics and 281,060 tool and die makers.

Fifty per cent of all metal working plants have definite plans to increase productive capacity during the remainder of the year "Steel" says.

The magazine in its weekly review of steel making activity reports many of the nation's steel mills are operating at 100 per cent capacity—some as high as 109 per cent—and backlogs are continuing to grow. Delivery delays continue, says the magazine, but no serious inconvenience appears to have resulted and supplies are making every effort to meet consumer needs

Greatest delay is in plates, structurals and special analysis steels.

300 God-Parents Make Dreams of Girl Come True

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 3—The golden voice of petite 17-year-old Barbara Ann Scully has made some of her dreams come true and now her 300 God-parents can say "We told you so"

It was four years ago that Dr. Paul Hickey, director of education at the Detroit McMichael intermediate school first heard her.

Part of the ceremony consisted of a song by flaxen-haired Barbara Ann and when Dr. Hickey heard her voice he looked up with amazement. Finding out all he could about the singer, he awaited the next meeting of the adult Bible class of the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal church, which he teaches.

The 300 class members promptly decided to "adopt" Barbara Ann by financing her musical education

Three years of serious study followed Recently Barbara Ann made her musical debut in an outdoor concert before a crowd of 4,000 who braved a drizzle to hear her surprisingly mature soprano.

After the concert, Guest Conductor Eduard Werner exclaimed amidst a roar of applause, "I am simply captivated by her voice I am glad to have a part in passing along this find to Detroiters, who will love her."

Critics say Barbara Ann's ability assures a happy future—

Europe Takes Inventory On War's First Birthday

Infant Conflict Has Wrecked Map, Killed and Maimed Millions—No End in Sight.

By PAUL K. LEE
Associated Press Staff Writer

The European war got fully under way a year ago today to the thunder of bomb blasts and airplane motors — the leitmotif in a drama of death and desolation which already has altered the face of a continent.

It was on Sept. 3, 1939, that Great Britain and France declared war on Germany, fulfilling their pledges to Poland, which the Nazi military machine had invaded two days earlier.

Now Britain stands alone against the onrush of a Germany abetted since June 10 by Fascist Italy.

Poland, Denmark, Norway, The Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg and finally France have fallen under German rule within the past year.

As "sideshows" to the main theater of action Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia have been swallowed up by Soviet Russia; Finland has lost much territory and a measure of free movement to Russia, and Rumania has been dismembered. Italy's current quarrel with Greece is fraught with possibilities

Airplane Comes of Age

In the war itself the airplane has played a new and dominant role.

Germany used the plane to crush Poland in less than a month; she used it to terrify and seize Denmark with a brief show of force; to overwhelm Norway and render Allied aid ineffective, and to smash the low countries and force a faltering France to accept a dolorous peace.

Now she is using it in the burgeoning battle of Britain, and the British in turn are using it in their fight for life.

Estimates of persons dead, wounded and missing already range from about 3,300,000 to 5,200,000, with the final toll likely to be found only in the history books of a later generation.

Reasonable figures on merchant and warships sinkings of all belligerents and neutrals total more than 3,075,055 tons.

The losses in tanks and big guns are inestimably great. Britain, for example, acknowledged loss of all her motorized equipment and most of her field pieces in the desperate retreat from Flanders late in May and early in June.

Economic and non-military property losses are as yet not even a subject for guesswork.

Losses May Tell Tale

Let the final key to Europe's fate may lie not in these losses but in the destruction of warplanes and the men who operate them

It is in this very field that the claims and admissions of losses vary most

German communiques since the war began have listed more than 5,000 enemy aircraft destroyed in the air or on the ground. The British place German losses at more than 4,000.

Neither side has issued grand totals, and even their day-to-day communiques do not offer an accurate check.

However, the Germans have claimed that during the drive on the low countries alone more than 1,800 Allied planes were shot down and 1,700 more were destroyed on the ground

Approximately 800 were shot down in the battle of France, the Germans said, and they claim that well over 1,000 British planes have been destroyed since Aug. 1. German anti-aircraft guns alone have accounted for 1,800 of the various foes, the Nazis said.

Own Losses Small

Against this they put their own losses at less than 500 up to the time France was defeated and less than 700 throughout the war

Semi-official Allied reports told of German planes being lost at the rate of 400 and 500 daily in the mad May days of blitzkrieg.

The British have listed more than 1,250 German planes destroyed over Britain alone since the war began, with their own losses under 500

Italy, a late starter, has claimed about 300 British planes destroyed to less than three score of her own in the fighting in Africa and the Mediterranean.

The British have emphasized repeatedly the number of their pilots saved when planes were lost, and have pointed out that German fliers downed in Britain will fly no more for the Reich But here, also, reliable figures do not exist

Germany's production has been estimated at up to 3,000 planes a month, with an initial force of about 18,000 or 20,000 first line bombers and pursuit planes.

British Gain Speed

The British only a fortnight ago announced that their own hastened and expanded construction, augmented by purchases in the United States, now equalled the German output. But no figures were given.

That the British are turning out many planes may be indicated by recent extension of their raids throughout Germany and on the industrial north of Italy.

Germany started almost daily air raids on Britain on June 18, when France's fall was assured though not yet formally accomplished

On Aug 8 the Nazis started mass raids by hundreds, even thousands, of planes, and on Aug. 15 bombed the vicinity of London for the first time.

On that occasion the Germans asserted the British had 3,000 fighter planes in the air.

Quiet on Damage

Each side tells of destruction of civilian property and lives—but almost nothing of military damage.

It has been freely predicted that Germany never will attempt invasion of Britain by land until and unless the Royal Air Force is knocked out.

But the season grows late, the weather grows worse, and forecasts of winter-long sparring and starvation blockading grow stronger each day.

In such an event, shipping and sources of supply may gain new prominence, while Luftwaffe and RAF await the bright spring to strike telling new blows

With an eye on this, Germany has just forced on unhappy Rumania concessions designed to settle "for all time" territorial squabbles in the Balkans Hungary is to get about half of the province of Transylvania and Bulgaria is to get satisfaction on her claims to southern Dobruja

Gets Aid in Return

Rumania is guaranteed protection against any further encroachments by Soviet Russia, which already has taken the Rumanian territories of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina.

Germany wants the Balkans to stay peaceful and productive, for Germany gets most of their produce and may well need it all this winter

Russia's compact with Germany last year, a week before the war began, made the war possible for the Reich Germany divided the Polish spoils with her but may look askance on too great a Russian penetration of the Balkan sphere

The Greek-Italian difficulties, whipped up by the Italian press, compose yet another unsettling possibility.

Italy, pent in the Mediterranean by Britain's control of Suez and Gibraltar, has had slim pickings of the war prizes. She occupied fragments of the French border area; she has driven the light British forces out of distant British Somaliland, and that is nearly all. Italian invasion of Egypt, close collaborator of Britain, has been threatened. Inconclusive aerial and naval engagements have occurred along the African coasts and in the east and west Mediterranean.

Some prognosticators have said that Italy and Germany may try to crack Suez or Gibraltar or both before the attempt to invade England.

Tournaments Highlight Labor Day Week-End on Marion Golf Courses

Players Have Busy Sessions at Country Club and Mar-O-Del; J. C. Woods Gets Hole-in-One.

Golf came in for its share of attention over the Labor day week-end. One of the largest turnouts of the season converged on both local courses to participate in tournaments and other special events.

Country Club

A blind bogey tournament, a flag tournament, a hole-in-one by J. C. Woods and a two under par 72 by Herb Petrich were highlights at the Country club over the holiday.

The golfers were divided into five classes for the bogey event according to the scores with which they finished. Prizes were awarded to the following: 70-80 group—Herb Petrich; 80-90 group—Sherman Halderman and Leo Groll; 90-100 group—Dale Miller, E J. Pierce, H. J. Grigsby, W. W Thompson, Tom Rayburn and J. A. Raub; 100-110 group—A. W. Kette and A. E Cheney; 110-130 group—W. L. Murphy and Dr. T. E. Nybladh.

Scores Sunday were as follows: Herb Petrich 78, E. C. Dee 88, Sherman Halderman 89, Leo Groll 89, G. E. Darnell 81, George Probst 95, Dale Miller 94, W. J. Rowley 90, Judge H. S. Young 90, E J. Pierce 94, P. M. Curl 90, John Dugan 91, J. C. Woods 91, B H Bueltin 91, M. K. Pinkerman 97, H. J. Grigsby 99, W. W. Thompson 92, Tom Rayburn 94, L. G. Uhl 91, J. A Raub 92, Dr. K. W. Keever 96, D. W. Mahaffey 98, John Peacock 90, R. T. Lewis 96, J. T. Carliss 97, F. G. Browne 97, Floyd Matteson 103, Kenneth Fields 105, A. W. Kette 104, Jack Stephenson 102, Dr. O. G. Stephenson 104, L D Cahoon 113, George Frank 106, Marion Cheney 100, J L. Miller 101, W. L. Murphy 121 and Dr T E Nybladh 125

J. C Woods joined the exclusive hole-in-one club Sunday as he sank his drive on the 189-yard par three third hole. Driving with a spoon, his ball dropped 12 feet from the pin and rolled on a direct line to the cup. He was playing in the company of R. T. Lewis, George Frank and Karl Schell This is the second time that this feat has been performed this season. R J. LaMarche sank his drive on this same hole earlier in the year.

Herb Petrich had low score among the golfers Monday as he fired a 37-35 for a two under par 72 F W. Bacon was second low with a 75 Bill Schimmel, club pro, carded a 75 and K. M. Bower an 80.

George DeWolfe won the flag tournament as he placed his flag half way between the tee and green on number two hole. Other prize winners in this event were: Herb Petrich, John Peacock, John Dugan, B. H Bueltin, J. L. Miller, W. W. Thompson, W J. Rowley, J A. Slanser and F. W, Bacon

First round matches in the president's handicap tournament were completed. Second round matches will continue through this week. Last week's results are. first bracket—Leo Groll won by default from Bob Owens, Roger Loveless defeated Judge H. S. Young 4-2, F. W. Bacon won by default from Jack Irwin, F C. Powers won by default after a 36-hole tie from F. M. Sage, Herb Petrich downed F. B Huber 6 5, B H. Bueltin won over George Alber 3-1 after 36 holes and John Dugan ousted J. T. Lynch 4-3. Angered at the Delay Veritzen Cuts His Phone, Starting a Series of Exasperations.

"I'll emphasize that," I told my father, taking his hint and own departure simultaneously. But when I got back to the telephone and fitted the receiver to my ear and the mouthpiece to my lips, my interrogative "Mr. Veritzen?" elicited only a deep silence, and I realized that the annoyance of a disconnected number was in store for me.

Mindful of the telephone rule to "hang up your receiver and make your call again," I obeyed.

There was a familiar buzzing sound and then the voice of the operator:

"The line is busy. Will you please hang up for a little while. I will call you back as soon as I can get the number."

I obeyed her with an exasperated little feeling of frustration, for I knew exactly what had happened from my long experience of Philip Veritzen's little ways. He had become so annoyed at waiting and the operator, thinking he was through with his conversation, that he had hung up his receiver, had disconnected. Then he had called again at the same moment that I was putting in my call, and must have received the busy signal as I had done.

At Cross Purposes

Whether Philip Veritzen and I were "physically attuned," or whether some malevolent little imp was presiding over our attempted colloquy, I shall never know. But for three trials, every time I took down the receiver and asked for his hotel, I received the busy signal, and was sure that on the other end of the wire he was attempting to get me and fuming at the busy signal the hotel operator was receiving.

Finally, when my nerve ends were as frayed as I was sure Philip Veritzen's were, I made a desperate appeal to the operator.

"I am expecting a most important call from this number," I told her. "When I left the telephone, Mr. Veritzen was on the other end of the wire and expected to stay there until I came back with a message to him from my father. In some manner, the telephone became disconnected, and upon four separate calls since, I have received the busy signal. I am sure he is trying to call me. Couldn't you cut in and find out?"

Cutting In

"I will try to get the number for you," she said, carefully noncommittal on the "cutting-in" process, and in another second, I heard the great impresario's voice in violent protest—as he supposed—to the hotel telephone operator, but instead reaching my ears alone. I surmised that the sorely harassed operators had switched him to me without announcement, leaving me to deal with him.

I girded my courage, knowing that I might need it, and spoke swiftly, without any comment on the delay.

"I have my father's answer, Mr. Veritzen," I said abruptly, and he instantly switched his attention—and his grievances to me.

"I have been trying to get you for half an hour," he said heatedly, and I smiled to myself at the exaggeration.

"Were you talking on your line?" he asked next, his voice filled with deep resentful reproach that I should have dared to talk to anyone else while he was waiting.

"No, indeed," I assured him promptly. "I have been trying to get your number, but each time received the busy signal, because of course, as I see now, you were trying to get me at the same time. But now I am very much at your servcie."

To my surprise he did not answer me promptly as from his exasperation, I had expected, and I wondered if perhaps he might be dreading to hear the answer. Finally, in tones as abrupt as my own he flung the question at me.

"What does he say?"

• • •

"HE SAYS," I began slowly, for I dreaded the effect of my father's message upon Philip Veritzen's arrogant spirit. "That he cannot give you his private number because there are seasons why he does not wish to talk to anyone over the telephone just now."

I paused for breath, and he struck in, not in angry resentment, as I had expected, but in desperate appeal.

"But this is a matter of life or death, I tell you."

"He wants to see you," I said quickly. "He wishes you to come over here as soon as you possibly can get here, but if you come you must plan to stay at the farm two or three days, and have Otto remain here, also."

His gusty sigh of relief and gratification was plainly audible over the wire.

"That is what I hoped he would say," he commented. "Please tell him that Otto and I will be at the farmhouse within the hour, prepared to stay as long as we are needed."

"Father will be glad to hear that," I told him. "I will tell him at once. Good-bye!"

"Au revoir," he answered, and hung up the receiver, while, with a smile at his incurable mannerisms, I hurried upstairs to give my father his message.

Ill-Timed Levity

He was not alone. My husband and Lillian's were deep in consultation with him, but I knew that my father would not object to my delivering the message where they could hear it, and I made my report as brief as possible.

I guessed that my father was gratified at Philip Veritzen's prompt acquiescence in his request, but his face betrayed no emotion of any kind. Harry Underwood and Dicky, however, were distinctly mirthful over the great impresario's frank gratification in becoming a resident of the farmhouse.

"Ain't love wonderful?" Harry Underwood drawled.

"All that, and then some," my husband supplemented. "But then, you can't blame the old peacock for wanting to strike an attitude defending his 'qveen.'"

The gibing little speech jarred me a bit, not because I objected to any adverse comment upon my former employer, but because I thought any levity on my husband's part in the face of the things confronting him was ill-timed.

"I may be mistaken," my father said judicially, "but I do not think he was thinking primarily of his royal fiance when he telephoned Margaret. What was your impression, Daughter?"

I already had given him my reaction to Philip Veritzen's tense and explosive attitude over the telephone, but I saw that for some reason he wished me to repeat the conversation again for the benefit of Dicky and Harry.

"I never have seen him more perturbed," I said. "He usually is so poised, so—"

"Shall we say 'smugly arrogant?'" Dicky interposed with a grin.

"Whatever you please," I answered, demurely. "But whatever you call his usual pose—"

"'Pose' is the right word, darling," Dicky said, then made quick apology to my father.

"I'm sorry, Dad!" he said. "I shouldn't take up valuable time this way, but I sort of have a brain wave every time I think of that old buzzard, and—"

"You are pardoned," my father said with the wraith of a smile curving his own lips. "Indeed, I am not exceedingly keen about Mr. Philip Veritzen myself, but—I believe that his proposed visit may result in some slight advantage to us. At an rate, if he is here, we shall be sure of his whereabouts, his safety, and—that he is not getting into mischief."

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, Sept. 4

AN INTERESTING and progressive state of affairs is the augury for this day, according to the predominant planetary aspects. The mentality will be highly stimulated to see quick ways and means for putting important movements into operation. High pressure plans and programs are more than likely to have appeal to big business heads, with funds for promoting clever propositions available. Some small changes may be necessary. It is admonished to be cautious with strangers. In the private life romance looms.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a very lively, progressive and happy year, with important developments in both private and business life. The mind will be particularly astute and keyed up to propositions of magnitude. High-pressure salesmanship is bound to enlist ready support of capital for promotion, with the hearty cooperation of those in power and position.

A child born on this day may be splendidly endowed with mentality which it may apply either to business or to any number of creative forms, professionally or intellectually. It will be resourceful and enterprising. It might lean toward dramatic art.

The Shame Of Ohio Highways Under Bricker

Do you remember the fine condition of the State roads, when Martin L. Davey was Governor? Repairs were made promptly. Weeds and grass were kept mowed. Detours were the least inconvenient. There were no bad holes and bumps, or dangerous edges. Snow was removed as fast as it fell. Icy places were covered promptly with sand or cinders. Muddy water was not allowed to stand on pavements. The highways of Ohio were maintained in fine condition, under Davey.

Martin L. Davey

Well, suppose you had in your town a fine, smooth-running factory, and a new president were elected. Suppose that the first thing he did was to fire all the competent and experienced employees, who know how to use the expensive machinery, and how to turn out good production at low cost. Wouldn't you think that new president was crazy? That's just what Bricker did to the State Highway Department as soon as he became Governor. He fired all the experienced help, including many hundreds who had been under Civil Service for years. He made the sanctimonious claim that this was done for purposes of economy and efficiency.

What hypocrisy! Almost immediately he hired a flock of new emloyees, Bricker politicians, who did not know any more about highway maintainance than an Eskimo knows about raising bananas.

The result has been tragic. The State roads of Ohio have never been in such terrible condition as they are now. Thousands of miles are full of holes and ruts and bumps. The edges are going to pieces. Grass and weeds have not been mowed, until it was too late. Many accidents have resulted.

The damage to motor vehicles from bad roads has been terrific, and the patience of the public is near the exhaustion point.

Bricker did not have the snow removed promptly. People had to plow through snow-drifts if they could. Travel was slow, and dangerous, and costly.

The icy places were not covered with sand or cinders. They were dangerous in the extreme. More accidents happened from this neglect in the last two winters, than in any ten-year period preceding.

Bricker allowed the snow to remain on the highways and melt where it stood. Motorists had to plow through frequent puddles of muddy water, at great expense and danger.

The standing water seeped down under the pavements—and then it froze. The pavements heaved up from the freezing, on hundreds of miles of Ohio roads. The damage resulting from this neglect has run into many millions of dollars—and you pay for Bricker's neglect.

The cement trust has the present State Highway Department by the throat. Nearly everything is cement, in spite of the fact that Ohio produces practically all kinds of road-building materials and equipment. The Bricker administration has gone wild on building short stretches of terribly expensive pavements, a few miles here and there. These fancy jobs cost from $100,000.00 to nearly $300,000.00 per mile. What a colossal waste!

Ohio has seventeen thousand miles of highways in the State system. Nearly all of this is being neglected under Bricker, while they revel in the luxury of a few expensive jobs.

What Ohio needs is a vast program of cheaper construction, with some reasonable exceptions, and a fine job of good maintenance, so that all may benefit.

WHEN Miss Helen Dorsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Walter A. Dorsey of 293 South Vine street, walked down the candlelit aisle of Emanuel Lutheran church to become the bride of Robert Klatt, Saturday evening, she wore her mother's ivory tinted wedding dress of Jusi cloth over China silk. Deep shirring provided fullness for the floor-length skirt which had three deep tucks around the bottom. The tight-fitted bodice had deep v-shaped insets extending to the waistline in the front and back, and these, together with the high-banded collar, were trimmed with fine narrow lace. The full, three-quarter length sleeves were finished with bands of the material and edged with lace and the wide ribbon sash was held with a large bow in the back. Three narrow ruffles edged the China silk slip. Her bridal veil, which had been worn by her sister, Mrs. Fred Slough of Springfield at her wedding only a few years ago, was held with a band of stephanotis and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and stephanotis.

Mr. Dorsey escorted his daughter to the altar and gave her in marriage. Preceding her down the aisle were her sister Mrs. Slough, who was her matron of honor, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry Dorsey of Cleveland, and Mrs. Joseph Kelly of Columbus, bridesmaids.

Mrs. Slough's gown, fashioned on princess lines was in a deep rose shade. Tiny self-covered buttons extended down the front of the gown, which was lace trimmed and the lace was repeated on the short, puffed sleeves. The bridesmaids' gowns were fashioned alike of silk marquisette over taffeta in soft shades of pink. Lace outlined the yokes and trimmed the short, puffed sleeves, and the full skirts were paneled down the front. All the attendants wore tiny frilled pancake hats matching their dresses topped with flowers identical with the flowers in their bouquets. Mrs. Slough carried a Colonial bouquet of light bronze pompons and gladioli, and the bridesmaids' flowers were pale pink pompons and blue delphinium. They wore the bride's gifts, a strand of pearls.

Carl Schultheis of Dayton served as best man for Mr. Klatt, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Klatt of Dayton, and seating the guests for the ceremony were Roderick Eley, Jack Heywood of Dayton, Joseph Kelly of Columbus and Harry Dorsey, brother of the bride, of Cleveland. Mr. Klatt's gifts to the best man and ushers were gold watch chains.

Palms and ferns banked the altar and formed a background for the large white vase filled with white gladioli, asters and euphorbia and the tapers held in candelabra. Lighted candles, caught to the pews with greenery and white ribbon completed the decorations.

Preceding the ceremony, which was read at 7:30 o'clock by Rev. M. E. Hollensen, pastor, Mrs William Ackerman Jr., pianist, Miss Cleo Finley, cellist and Robert Byrd, violinist, played a program of nuptial music. The program included "Sylvia," Speaks, "Gypsy Love Song," Herbert, "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life," Herbert, "Because," d'Hardelot, "Love's Old Sweet Song," Gonod's "Sanctus," and "I Love You Truly," Bond. For the processional and recessional the trio played the wedding music from Wagner's "Lohengrin," and the wedding march by Mendelssohn.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Dorsey chose a pink lace dress with which she wore a powder blue turban accented with lace matching her dress, and white accessories. The bridegroom's mother wore a costume of black and slate blue velvet. Both wore corsages of gardenias.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents were hosts at a reception at their home. Garden flowers were used throughout the rooms. Assisting were Mrs. E. H. Stork, Miss Betty Heusch and Miss Martha Owen of Columbus, Miss Evelyn Gordon of McConnellsville, Mrs. Ralph Watts of Greensburg, Pa., Mrs. William Klatt and Mrs. Loyal Locke, sister of the bridegroom, of Dayton, Mrs. Carl Watrous, Mrs. J. G. McNamara, Miss Betty Miller and Miss Margaret Watrous.

When the new Mr. and Mrs. Klatt left on a short wedding trip the bride donned a smart navy blue costume accented with green and white, with a matching full-length coat, and a small felt and grosgrain ribbon hat. Upon their return they will live at 1003 East Center street.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of Ohio State university. The bride is a member of Delta Zeta sorority and has been making her home in Columbus where she has been employed in the seed laboratory of the state department of agriculture. Mr. Klatt, a graduate of the college of engineering, is with the Marion Steam Shovel Co.

Out-of-town guests here for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. William Klatt, Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Locke, Mrs. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Barr, Mr. and Mrs Roderick Eley, Miss Mary Ryder of Dayton, Mrs. Lura Ryder of Lorain, Mr. and Mrs. Imo Schieffer and daughter, Jane, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. George Nagel, Miss Betty Heusch, William Beery, Miss Martha Owen, Miss Fay McCoy, Miss Virginia Webb, Miss Mary Clawson, Mrs. G. V. Oxley, Mr. and Mrs. George Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Berlien, Mr. and Mrs. E. H Stork of Columbus, Miss Evelyn Gordon of McConnellsville, Mr. and Mrs J. F. Slough and Mr. and Mrs Fred Slough of Springfield, Misses Mary and Elizabeth Owen, Richard Owen and daughter of Newark and Dr. and Mrs. J. Lee Kelly of Eaton.

A group of about 30 friends surprised John C. Schelfler of 195 Barnhart street Saturday evening in honor of his birthday anniversary. The rooms were decorated with fall flowers and games and contests provided entertainment. Awards were won by Miss Margaret Haberman, Mrs. Erle Houser, Mrs. Robert Gamble and LaVern Nash. The celebrant received a number of remembrances. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Scheifler Jr., assisted by her mother, Mrs. E. R. Houser, Mrs. J. C. Scheifler, and Mrs. M. A. Sparks. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lusk of Galion, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Sparks of Strasburg and John Houser of Cleveland.

Miss Mary Laird Becomes Bride of Geo. Parcher

MRS. GEORGE PARCHER

IN A CEREMONY read at 8 o'clock Sunday morning in Trinity Baptist church Miss Mary Elizabeth Laird, daughter of Mrs. Eva Laird of 800 North State street and the late Charles Laird, became the bride of George Parcher of Wyandot. The service was read by the pastor, Rev. Lawrence A. Wood, in an open church ceremony.

Palms and baskets of pink and blue gladioli and snapdragons decorated the altar. Preceding the ceremony there was a program of nuptial music with Mrs. Cecil Davis at the organ. Misses Eileen and Lucille Pierce sang.

Mrs. J. L. Sidenstricker, sister of the bride, was her maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Catherine Cochran of Morral and Miss Geneva Peak. The attendants' gowns were fashioned in similar lines and all carried white Testaments showered with white baby mums, gifts of the bride. Mrs. Sidenstricker was in yellow, Miss Cochran in pink and Miss Peak in blue.

The bride's gown was white net over white satin. The full skirt fell floor-length and the tight-fitting bodice had a sweetheart neckline and puffed sleeves Her bridal veil was fingertip length and was caught to her hair with baby chrysanthemums and her jewelry was a strand of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. She carried a White Bible showered with white pompons.

Clarence Bachr served as best man for Mr. Parcher, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Parcher of Wyandot. Ushers were Leonard Daniel and Robert Scott of Wyandot.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Laird wore a blue lace costume with dark blue accessories and her flowers were a corsage of gardenias.

Following the ceremony the bride's mother entertained with a breakfast for 30 guests at her home. Later the couple left on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls. For her going away costume the bride chose a navy blue pin stripe suit with dusty pink accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

The bride was graduated from Harding High school with the class of 1940. Mr. Parcher is employed as a clerk at the Ray Chance general store at Wyandot, where the couple will make their home.

KIWANIS PARTY SET

Weddings

The marriage of Miss June Stoffer of Shelby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Stoffer of 780 Oak Grove avenue, and Verne G. Bowen, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bowen of Mansfield, took place Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the First United Brethren church parsonage on South Prospect street. Rev. Carl V. Roop, pastor, read the double ring ceremony.

The brides dress was of burnt topaz crepe, with which she wore brown accessories, and her flowers were Talisman and Johanna Hill roses and baby breath. Her attendant, Miss Martha Burkholder of Mansfield, was in black and white and wore a corsage of American beauty roses and baby breath. Fred Gertel of Mansfield was Mr. Bowen's best man.

Dinner was served at 8 oclock to the wedding party and close relatives at the brides home. Afterwards the couple left on a trip to Cleveland. Mrs. Bowen, a graduate of Mansfield High school in 1935, is with the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. at Mansfield.

Miss Vada Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milford Johnson of 194 Edwards street and Oren J. Tannery, son of Mrs. Martin Johnson of 285 Patterson street, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. W. L. Shinn of Kenton, pastor of First Church of God of Marion, read the single ring service. The bride was in a royal blue crepe dress, with a corsage of pink roses, and her maid of honor, Miss Betty Lou Wagner, also was in royal blue. Kenneth Forsythe of Marion was the best man. Mr. and Mrs. Tannery will live in Marion. Mr. Tannery is a painter by trade. Present at a reception were the bridal party and Rev. and Mrs. Shinn of Kenton, Clark T. Farley of Pittsville, Ky., Rev. S. M. Oiler, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Milford Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Shields and daughter Ruth Ann, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Belt and children, Norma Jean and Carol Francis, Mrs. Vada Lucas, Russell Woods, Mrs. Henry Fortner, Mrs. George Willis, Mrs. George Short, Mrs. Pearl Sigler, Mrs. Inez Gulluzza, Joseph Johnson Jr. of Prospect, Otis Johnson, Emma and Teresa Ann Johnson, Mrs. Doris Wagner and children Barbara and Robert. Hilda Bicknell, Gladys Wilma, Dorcas, James and Milford Johnson Jr.

Miss Schaffner, New York Man Exchange Vows

OF interest here is the marriage of Miss Barbara Schaffner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reed Schaffner of Canton, former residents of Marion, to Dean Howarth Lapp, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Lapp of LeRoy, N. Y., which took place Saturday at Hess lodge, the Schaffner family lodge at Bernhard's Bay, N. Y. The bride is the granddaughter of Mrs. W. H. Schaffner of 403 South Prospect street.

The only guests were members of the families and intimate friends. Rev. Henry Williams of Oneida, N. Y, officiated at the service at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The large living room of the lodge was decorated with masses of white flowers and greens. The couple stood before the fireplace banked with greens and bouquets of gladioli. Two tall candelabra with white tapers cast a soft glow.

The bride was unattended. She wore a lovely afternoon frock of delphinium blue cashmere and a corsage of white cymbidium orchids.

Wendell Lapp of LeRoy, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The ceremony was followed by a buffet supper at the lodge.

Later in the evening, Mr. Lapp and his bride left for a boat trip up the St. Lawrence and Saguenay rivers, sailing from Montreal. Mrs. Lapp's traveling costume was her blue wool dress with black and cranberry accessories.

The couple will be at home after Oct. 1 at 3 East avenue, LeRoy, N. Y.

The former Miss Schaffner was graduated from Wells college and for the last year had been associated with The Repository at Canton. Mr. Lapp is an alumnus of the University of Rochester and did graduate work at Ohio State university. He belongs to Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and is associated with the Lapp Insulator Co. at LeRoy.

Taylor-Strayer Nuptials Read at Home of Bride

MRS. STANLEY C. STRAYER JR.

SUNDAY afternoon at 3:30 o'clock Miss June Taylor, daughter of Mrs. Beulah Taylor of 581 Pearl street and the late Fred W. Taylor, and Stanley C. Strayer Jr. of Wilmington, Del, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley C Strayer of West Church street, repeated their marriage vows at the home of the bride. Only the immediate families and close friends of the couple attended the double ring service read by Rev. R. C. Ryder of Dayton, pastor of the First United Brethren church at Xenia.

For the ceremony the bridal party stood before the fireplace in the living room which was banked with ferns and palms and centered with a tall vase filled with white gladioli. On either side was a seven-branch candelabra holding lighted tapers.

Preceding the bride down the stairway was Miss Betty Strayer, sister of the bridegroom and her only attendant. William Taylor, brother of the bride, was Mr Strayer's best man.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, M. J. Spencer of Chillicothe, wore a floor length gown of powder blue Jerome crepe, made with a high neckline and short, puffed sleeves The tight-fitting bodice was trimmed down the front with self-covered buttons, and the extremely full skirt was accented with shirring at the hipline. Completing her costume were pink satin slippers and she carried an arm bouquet of Briar Cliff roses, gypsophila and blue larkspur, and wore a single pink rose in her hair.

Miss Strayer's gown was of rose Jerome crepe, fashioned on lines similar to that worn by the bride. She carried an arm bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs Taylor chose a gown of Soldier Blue alpaca crepe with which she wore wine colored accessories. The bridegroom's mother was costumed in a navy blue sheer crepe suit with matching accessories. Both wore corsages of Briar Cliff roses

Preceding the ceremony there was a program of nuptial music. Miss Dorothy Pace played "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life," Herbert, "One Alone," Romberg, "At Dawning," Cadman, "Indian Love Call," Friml and "I Bring a Love Song," Romberg. Miss Ruth Ellen Mounts and Miss Pauline Shelton sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly." As the bridal party entered the room Miss Pace played the "Bridal Chorus" from Wagner's "Lohengrin," and during the ceremony she played "La Estrellita," Sawyer. At the close of the service she played the Mendelssohn Wedding March.

Miss Pace wore a gown of blue flowered organdy, made with a deep square neckline, fitted bodice and full skirt, and Miss Mounts and Miss Shelton's gowns of rose and green were fashioned on similar lines. To light the candles Miss Jane Spencer, cousin of the bride, wore a gown of dusty crepe made with a high neckline and shirred waist

The bride's gifts to her attendants were gold necklaces, and Mr. Strayer gave his best man a leather billfold.

There was a reception and buffet lunch following the ceremony. The three-tiered wedding cake, cut by the new Mr. and Mrs. Strayer, was topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom. Assisting in the dining room were Miss Laurel Hanley, Miss Eleanor Epley, Miss Mary Cae Hogan, Miss Elizabeth Gray and Miss Margaret Gray

When the couple left on a wedding trip through the east the bride donned a suit of black sheer wool crepe The jacket had lapels of white embroidered pique and her small black felt hat had a shirred crown and a short veil. Her accessories were in black and she wore a corsage of red roses.

The bride was graduated from Harding High school in 1934 and the Marion Business college in 1935 She has been employed as cashier with the Western & Southern Life Insurance Co. She is a charter member of the Alpha Chapter of the Gradale sorority and a past queen of Bethel No 2, Job's Daughters. Mr. Strayer graduated from Harding High

The World at War

ONE year ago Great Britain and France, convinced by Germany's preparations to invade Poland that appeasement had become an untenable policy, went to war. They undertook to meet Adolf Hitler's force with force. The outcome still hangs in the balance.

Today the war thus started involves virtually the entire world. It has laid the curse of violence either directly or indirectly on Finland, Russia, Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, Rumania, Hungary, Greece, Turkey. Its repercussions have been felt in the far east and in Africa. North and South America have felt its impact. The far-flung British empire is engaged in a death struggle. No man can see the end of the momentous and ghastly thing which has come about because a handful of men in Europe saw fit to loose violence once more in a frantic attempt to gain their way.

There has been little time during the past year to dwell on anything more than the problems at hand. It has been like a fire breaking out in a building full of scholars, who perforce ceased to be scholars and became firemen in the hope of surviving so they could be scholars again. Everywhere, men of thought have had to make way for men of action. The soldier suddenly has marched into the center of the stage. The art of making peace, having proved unfruitful, has been shelved for the art of making war. The phrenetic dynamism of the warrior states has become the thing which all states must match or exceed in order to survive.

But in all this, one thing, though rarely mentioned, has been plainly evident. There has been no love for war. The Germans, Italians, French, British, most deeply affected by war, have not taken up arms gladly but grimly. Americans, forced to become a military nation, have not welcomed the prospect. Nowhere, with the single exception of the intensively propagandized youth groups in Germany, has there been described anything but an attitude of reluctance to kill and maim. This is significant; it means the foundation exists for a revulsion against the war system which will make the revulsion following the World war seem like nothing but mild resentment.

Presidential Dignity

CRITICAL comment raining down on Mr. Willkie for addressing himself directly to Mr. Roosevelt instead of beating around the bush denotes a peculiar state of mind for a free country.

Where does the idea come from that Mr. Roosevelt is immune to interrogation? Perhaps from the same place that Mr. Wallace gets the idea that anyone who dares to question Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy is unpatriotic and therefore all Republicans are unpatriotic. This sort of thing must be getting a little thick for even the hardiest New Dealers.

Mr. Roosevelt may choose to run for reelection by pretending to remain aloof to Mr. Willkie while using catch-as-catch-can methods on him. He may choose not to discuss issues and to ignore such questions as Mr. Willkie's persistent inquiry about the Overton-Russell amendment to the conscription bill giving the government authority to seize private property. This may be the way to win reelection. It is not the way to uphold the dignity of the office Mr. Roosevelt occupies, however. Anyone presuming to criticize Mr. Willkie for hurting presidential dignity should be prepared to explain what's wrong about carrying the presidential campaign to the man who's running for a third term as president. Whom should Mr. Willkie address if not Mr. Roosevelt?

Pigskin Prevue

INCREDIBLE as it seems, there has been a football game in August. Almost 85,000 spectators turned out to watch it, and graduate managers in a hundred football universities throughout the land immediately laid plans for opening fall terms hereafter a month earlier.

The game, played in Chicago between a team of collegiate stars and the Green Bay Packers, toughest collection of talent last year in the National Football league, ended with a score of 45 to 28, the Packers winning. Obvious purpose of the game was to warm up the 1940 football season, with a total of 73 points as an appetizer. Most of them were scored on passes.

P. S.: The same graduate members in a hundred football universities immediately made a note to give the public what it wants this year—more touchdowns, more action, more passes. After all, 85,000 spectators can't go wrong.

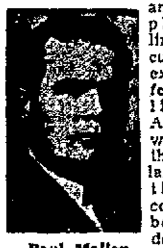
News Behind the News

Negotiations Reported for U. S. Base in Brazil to Ease America's Defense Problem.

By PAUL MALLON

ABOARD PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S SPECIAL TRAIN, Sept. 3—Negotiations for a U. S. naval-air base in Brazil—one that will safeguard the south Atlantic—are rising softly in the official winds. Preliminary soundout work has been started on this next step in the hemisphere base-leasing job which Mr. Roosevelt began with the British and Canadians before taking time off for his politically scenic tour into the south.



Paul Mallon

Presidential arrangers are working on a "quadrasphere" new unheralded defense system, an inner hemisphere defense line which will cut in half the extensive indefensible outer line of the Americas. It would run from the Newfoundland bases, which the LaGuardia commission has been inspecting, down to the prospective new Brazilian base site around Natal, thence west to Hawaii and Alaska.

The Brazilians have some navy and air facilities around Natal, but these are not sufficient. While Mr. Roosevelt's arrangers have nothing as large as Guantanamo in mind, they do want a formidable outpost at this southernmost tip of the American axis.

Well do they know that whoever controls the bulge of Brazil into the Atlantic will control the approaches from the east.

Business Analysis Due

A flock of reports from Mr. Roosevelt's lieutenants on what is wrong with business will pour forth from the temporary national economic committee as soon as a signal is given.

The reports have been slipped to the committee in executive privacy by the bright young men of many government departments and cover such significant subjects as "Labor Policy of American Corporations," "Bureaucracy and Trusteeship in Large Corporations," "Structure of Fifty Large Corporations," "Distribution of Individual Incomes," "Distribution of Ownership in 200 Largest Financial Corporations," "Public Price Policy," "Relative Efficiency of Big and Little Business," "Insurance."

The last is as hot as any. It rips insurance systems into minute particles and its publication will cause sharp controversy. Lieutenants in the federal trade commission have, however, presented several thousand kind words about the efficiency of middle-size businesses, concluding these are more efficient than the big or little. There is much in the reports about concentration of wealth and government financing of small business.

Question is whether to break the dozen reports already finished or to wait for about eight more. Behind this is the problem of whether the reports would furnish good campaign material or frighten business too much.

Doubt The Poll

Mr. Roosevelt rode south on the buoyant wings of a Gallup poll claiming popular majorities from 69 to 90 per cent for him in southern states, but his southern political leaders do not put much faith in that elevating conclusion. The poll was conducted on a class-sifting basis, whereas the voting next November 5 will be restricted to those who pay poll taxes, in most of the southern states. The difference is apt to be considerable.

Willkie organizations, at first dismayed by the results of the southern polls, are now reviving their southern campaign organizations.

Bite Their Nails

While Mr. Roosevelt was trying to ascertain if, behind the Great Smokies, there is any political fire, some of his publicity people are biting their nails and preparing to unravel the tangled publicity affairs of the national defense commission. It seems the Norton system there is superceding the non-political publicity staffs of the navy, army and marine corps. A sort of centralized control has been set up under the invisible guidance of Mr. Roosevelt's new private publicity director, Lowell Mellett.

This has resulted in the defense commission revealing what the army and navy consider secrets. For instance, contracts for 60 or 70 ton tanks and submarine net tenders were announced, although the army and navy did not want anyone to know they contemplated having such weapons.

Wallace Speech

Vice Presidential Candidate Wallace's associates hereabouts insist he wrote his acceptance speech, although it was far away from his usual cool economic tone. He has been reading a lot of Thorsten Veblen and other exposes of Nazi infiltration and got himself so great smokeyed up he could see Hitler in every Republican face.

It was Mr. Roosevelt himself who sent the house ways and means committee back to hike the rates in the excess profits tax bill. He was not satisfied with the original rates and insisted, through the treasury, on making them tougher.

Expanding U. S. Air Force

We're Getting Both Men and Planes for Defense.

This is one of a series of articles prepared by the National defense Advisory commission to be published in The Star to give its readers a complete picture of the nation's preparedness program.

• • •

THE lessons learned in Poland, Norway, Flanders, and France have one answer. A nation must have an air force. The United States army has some of the best airplanes in the world. They can outfly and outfight most anything in the air. We need and we are getting a lot more. The President has set the goal at 50,000 planes.

In order to understand the types of planes and their functions in modern warfare, let us go back and follow Tom Smith, a recruit in the United States air training program, through his course. Tom is a young man between 20 and 26 years old, sound of wind, limb, and eye. He may have signed up in the civil aeronautics authority civilian program.

Simple Urimary Planes Needed

In such case his first requirement is a plane to learn to fly. There is no need for a fancy plane or a fast one. Just one that will let the instructor know whether Tom and the air get along well together. So when Tom reports to the field for his first lesson, he buckles on a parachute and waddles over to a little light plane that weighs about 900 pounds and is powered with a four-cylinder engine that looks like it had just graduated from a motorcycle. But it's enough to get him off the ground and around the airport.

These planes are simple to make, no fancy instruments, nothing but some steel tubing and cloth cover with a forty-horse engine in the front. They don't present much of a problem for the defense advisory commission for there are several factories where they are turned out in quantity and have been for some time.

Tom may have decided to get a more comprehensive training and passes the examination for flying cadet. The army takes him on for intensive schooling at the air corps training centers, starting with 10 weeks of training very similar to what he would have received in the advanced CAA school.

He receives flight instruction in a training plane that is sturdier, more powerful, but just about as slow. Along with his flight training he goes to ground school, learns how airplanes are built, what makes engines run, and more important, how to keep them from stopping. He also gets a course in air navigation. This includes maps, compasses, radio aids, all the scores of flying instruments that line instrument boards of the big ships, weather-forecasting, radio code, and airplane weapons. After 10 weeks' intensive work, when Tom begins to feel like both the Wright brothers rolled into one, he is told that he is ready for basic flight training, and steps into a single engine ship of more horsepower and more gadgets. Ten weeks here. Then the final ten in true advanced trainers. High powered, everything but guns and bombs, for the finishing touches.

Then for the first time he meets the real fighting ships of the air corps. They may be last year's planes, to be sure, but pretty impressive. Lined up on the hangar apron in the bright sun at his combat unit, is a row of glistening pursuit ships, throbbing with the life given them by their powerful motors—1,000 horsepower just to pull a man around the sky. Barely room enough inside for Tom to shoehorn himself into the cockpit. Wings that are no more than fins cast on the crankcase. With that much power a plane hardly needs wings. They just slow it down.

Types of Fighting Planes.

There are really two types of pursuit ships. Interceptors which can climb almost straight up and sink their machine gun bullets into enemy airplanes overhead, and fighters which go along with bombers and see to it that the enemy interceptors don't do likewise to our ships.

Next in size are the observation planes. These are big enough for two men, if they are friends. One man to fly and another to spot artillery fire, to find out what the enemy is up to, take pictures, to command ground troops, carry messages, and act as liaison between units.

Then come the bombers, big ships, the heavy artillery of the air. The biggest of these, the heavy bombers, can carry a crew of five, two tons of bombs more than 2,000 miles, deposit the bombs on the enemy, and get back home with a safe margin of gas left over.

In addition to these three basic types, there are attack planes whose small bombs and many machine guns are designed to make life miserable for enemy troops. There are also cargo transport and experimental planes.

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1930.

William D. Cooper, long-time employe and official of the Erie railroad, died at his home on West Columbia street at the age of 66.

Miss Christine Rieck of East Center street and Miss Margaret Seiter of South Main street returned from a month's vacation in the New England states.

Miss Hazel Ried, whose marriage to Harold Treby was to take plae in October, was honor guest at a dinner and shower given at Ringer's Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. John Truka and children of Hane avenue returned from a vacaton trip to Niagara Falls and Toronto.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Friday, Sept. 3, 1920.

Labor unrest was general throughout many parts of the world. In England a strike of 800,000 coal miners was set for Sept. 25 with 150,000 workers in other fields expected to be made idle by the walkout and strikes or threatened strikes were also under way in Italy, Spain, Germany and the United States.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Yake of Clover avenue and a son to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Noblett of Oak street.

On Thursday, Sept. 2, one of the major non-political events of the Harding presidential campaign took place when the Chicago Cubs, National league baseball team, came here to play an exhibition game with the Kerrigan Tailors, local independent team. The visit was primarily as a compliment to Mr. Harding, a lifelong baseball fan. The game, played at Lincoln park, ended in a 3 to 1 score in favor of the Cubs. Several of the best known players in baseball history were with the Cubs, inluding Grover Alexander, pitching ace whose name is now in the baseball Hall of Fame. He pitched the first two innings, Yeager succeeding him for the final seven. The crowd was said to be the largest ever attending a baseball game in Marion. It was estimated at 5,000. The only persons paying for admission were the approximately 700 who occupied grandstand seats and the charge was 50 cents each. All others, who occupied space around the field, were admitted free. About half of the 700 grandstand seats were sold in advance at the Selby & Markert cigar store uptown and the remaining half, placed on sale at the grounds at 1 p. m., were speedily sold. Senator and Mrs. Harding and a party of friends received a great ovation on their arrival at the grounds. They occupied central grandstand seats and Mr. Harding posed for several photographs, some with Chicago players and others with Marion players, including several members of old-time local teams. They were Benjamin Bieber, who played with the Marion Pastimes in 1868, W. G. Lucas and M. B. Dickerson, members of the Marion Stars and Jacob Keller, Samuel Fulton and John Rynn, who played with the Mohawks. These teams represented Marion back in the 1870's and 80's. Harding started off the game by pitching the first three balls. In the lineups, named in the order they came to bat, were: Cubs: Flack, rf; Terry, ss; Twombly, lf; Barber, 1b; Paskert, cf; Deal, 3b; Herzog, 2b; Gomes, c; Alexander and Yeager, p. Marion: Uhl, 1b; Miller, 3b; Rowland, lf; Daly, c; Price, cf; Fetter, ss; Lattimore, 2b; Jackman, rf; Martin and Bailey, p. The umpires were A. W. (Bert) Curtis of Marion and his brother, Cliff Curtis of Delaware, a former big league pitcher. The Curtis brothers during their early years formed a battery widely known in amateur baseball throughout this section of Ohio, with Cliff as pitcher and Bert doing the receiving. At that time both lived in Delaware.

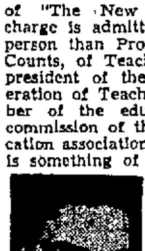
The black widow is the only poisonous spider of temperate North America.

Today and Tomorrow

American Colleges Charged with Failure To Educate Youth for Modern World.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

IN A paper circulated by the American Military Institute, Mr. Alfred Vagts discusses with much learning and insight the failure of the American colleges to educate young men for the world they now live in. Mr. Vagts does not exaggerate when he says that our "problems of psychological unpreparedness" amount "to national neuroses." In a recent issue of "The New Republic," the charge is admitted by no less a person than Professor George S. Counts, of Teachers college, the president of the American Federation of Teachers and a member of the educational policies commission of the National Education association. This confession is something of an event in the history of American education. For Teachers college has been the mecca of the "progressive" professors, and Professor Counts has been the author of successive editions of their Koran, during the generations between the first World war and the second.



Walter Lippmann

Professor Counts pleads guilty to "irrational optimism," and says that "the great hopes which so recently animated all of us are gone"—the "hope that the Russian revolution would point the way to the economic emancipation of the comman man; the hope that the peoples of Europe would reconcile their differences and devote their energies and talents to cultural advance; the hope that the League of Nations would bring a just and lasting peace to mankind." What Professor Counts has not yet got around to doing is to examining the causes why he, who has taught so many teachers, had not taught himself to withstand the ravages of irrational optimism. But Mr. Vagts, who seems to have escaped the effects of irrational optimism, has many illuminating things to say on the present psychological unpreparedness of the American people.

Mr. Vagts points out, for example, that "the doubts raised about the 'sense' of the first World war pushed the teaching of international relations into two directions—the cynical, which tended to lame the will to action, and the weakly overhopeful, the latter represented by the proponents of 'peaceful change.'" The observation is accurate: who that has read the debates in Congress or talked with recent graduates of the colleges has not been impressed by the degree to which American political thinking oscillates between cynicism and sentimentality, between despair and credulity, between an absolute agnosticism and an extreme gullibility?

It was said many years ago that a cynic is a disappointed sentimentalist; the cynicism which has been bred in the colleges can be traced directly to the latter-day historians who have indoctrinated our generation with the heresy that unless they reached utopia quickly and easily via Moscow or Geneva, they would be smarter to stay at home, that if at first they did not succeed, they would be fools to try again. At bottom these historians were sentimentalists—that is to say, men who wanted to enjoy the good life without earning it—and then they were cynics who derided the good life, saying that the grapes were sour because they were beyond their reach.

No Greatness

"In neither school of thought," says Mr. Vagts, that is to say neither among the cynics who explained away the war as a conspiracy of the bankers and a clash of imperialisms nor among the sentimentalists who denied that there is a real conflict in the world between good and evil—in neither school of thought "was there to be found that convincing greatness and scientific authority which goes with a high concept in politics or history." The teaching of politics and history in American colleges has, for the most part, been emptied of all the elements of greatness—that is to say of the conviction that history is not the meaningless tale

Speaking of Hair

New Hats Call for Different Hair-Do, and That Brings Us To the Subject of the "Rat."

By DAMON RUNYON

SOME of the ladies are now wearing little hats that sit so far back on their beans you can not see them except from a rear view. These hats are stuck up against the skull at a point about midway of the upper edges of the ears. Average size of the hat is that of a neatly poached egg.

We are not mentioning these new hats in any spirit of criticism. We have carefully refrained from criticising sconce-pieces of the ladies ever since the day we saw Lee Shubert and Harry Kauffman, the theatrical fellows, buzzing along in an open auto in Miami in berets. If prominent citizens like them can take liberties with head-gear, why not the ladies?

Damon Runyon

To tell the truth, we rather favor small hats. For some months past the ladies were tending toward helmets that suggested old boots in which vegetation had taken root and flowered. After a lapse of years, it was again becoming necessary to lean forward in the movie houses and ask: "Madam, will you kindly take off your hat?"

This step invariably has repercussions calculated to take the edge off a man's enjoyment of the picture. The temperature in his vicinity immediately falls far below that of the air-cooling system. There is a sudden rigidity of manner in the lady so accosted that suggests wounded dignity, if not insult. Her escort, if any, also stiffens truculently and whips a scowl around across his shoulder. There is an ominous muttering between them.

THE GUY making the aforesaid request is made to feel he is not only pretty much of a Crumbola, but in some physical danger. Even if the hat is reluctantly removed, he wishes he had said nothing and viewed the picture in around the edges of the dicer. Under such circumstances, we have often sneaked out before a picture ended, dreading the withering sizing up we knew we would receive from the offended lady when the lights went on again and she turned around to see what kind of an insect we were.

It is even worse when you happen to be the escort of the lady requested by the gent behind her to take off her hat. You sense that she rather expects you to get up and give the gent a good boff on the beezer, or at the very least a first class bawling out. You realize that your inaction in the matter drops you 40 degrees in her estimation. The way we get around that is to keep growling inaudibly under our breath, so the lady thinks we are growling at the guy, though in truth and in fact we are usually growling in sympathy with his request. But of course this must never get out.

WE CAN remember when the house management relieved the movie customers of the embarrassments and even hazards of this situation by flashing on the screen before the beginning of a picture the words: "Ladies will please remove their hats." This custom was abandoned as unnecessary as the hats got smaller. Apparently the management do not keep up with the hat fashions and have been letting gentlemen customers run their own risks.

There seems to be one disadvantage even in the new hats that sit far back on the noggin. It appears that a pompadour hair-do goes with them. The hair is worn with a high roll in front and the new hat is tacked on somehow behind that roll, like a clam nesting in behind a breaker on the beach. It seems to us that an extreme pompadour is just as tough on the guy in back of it at a movie as a top hat.

However, we hear some of the ladies bleating about this hair-do on the ground it is too difficult, so perhaps it will not last long. They can not put it past us as a new style, either. We can remember when a lady was practically no lady at all if she did not wear her hair with a pompadour effect.

THE WAY they kept the pompadour firmly fixed was by wrapping the hair around what was called a "rat" because it looked like one. A rat was an object made of hair that served to shape and anchor the pompadour. Without a rat, the pompadour will not stay put for long, especially if a lady shakes her head too much. Which reminds us that for years ladies have been shaking their heads at us. Always sideways.

Anecdotes of Ohio

By GILBERT F. DODDS

Joseph B. Foraker, 37th governor of Ohio and U. S. Senator from 1893 to 1903, was but a 16-year-old youth during the Civil war when he was selected by General Sherman to carry the news of the capture of Savannah to the Atlantic fleet. The journey was necessitated because communications had been disrupted for months.

At the outbreak of the war young Foraker's persuasiveness was so extraordinary that he was able to recruit more men for his own company than any other soldier in the regiment, it was reported.

After the war Foraker returned to Ohio, where he was admitted to the bar and entered politics. Largely because he always espoused the cause of his erstwhile compatriots of the battlefields, Foraker enjoyed a long and successful political career.

Through Mexican Jungles

By The Associated Press

MANZANILLO, Mexico — Two slim young American vagabond explorers, Dana and Ginger Lamb, are hacking their way through Mexican coastal jungles on a 2,000-mile hike just to toughen up for the goal of their new explorations, the Lost City of the Mayas.

"We certainly are getting put through the paces," the young couple report.

"It is a land of mud, rain and mosquitoes. Every trail that was used by the natives in the dry season is now blocked by deadwood and vines that have been knocked down by terrific squalls. We have to cut our way through this tangled maze with our machetes, nearly every foot of the way. If this doesn't toughen us up for the jaunt into the Forbidden Land, we don't know what will."

The wiry couple left their Santa Ana home last April. They are hardened vagabonds. On a 16,000-mile honeymoon started in 1933, they sailed down the west coast of Central America, spent six months on the treasure island of Cocos, and finally piloted their 16-foot craft through the Panama canal. The fruit of this honeymoon was one of the best selling non-fiction books of 1938, "Enchanted Vagabonds."

They figure the new exploration will be a matter of years. Lamb is convinced from his research that a real scientific treasure is to be found in the Lost City of the Mayas. This, he says, will be a library, discovery of which he hopes will add a thrilling store of knowledge about the lost civilizations of ancient Central America.

Beginning with 1840, every U. S. president elected in a year ending in zero died in office—1840, William H. Harrison; 1860, Abraham Lincoln; 1880, James A. Garfield; 1900, William McKinley; 1920, Warren G. Harding.

Yanks Move In As Pacesetters Fall

Champs Only 3½ Games Behind in Torrid American League Flag Chase.

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The American league is heading for its wildest wind-up in modern history. The big Labor day blowoff, which incidentally brought out 264,000 fans—173,000 in American league parks—just about raised everybody's temperature to the boiling point.

Both the Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers dropped double-headers while the New York Yankees split with the Philadelphia Athletics before 69,940 fans at Yankees stadium.

New York to Second

The world champions thus moved into second place by a slender percentage margin, .5634 to .5625, over the Detroit Tigers while the lead of the Indians over each now is 3½ games.

The National league, which usually stages the big September show, already has virtually awarded the championship to the Cincinnati Reds for another term.

The fact that the Yankees' winning streak finally was sliced at eight games may have furnished some encouragement to their rivals. With Lefty Marius Russo pitching five-hit ball they had no trouble taking the opener from the A's 6-3, but they couldn't do anything with the "slider" of Johnny Babich in the nightcap and were shut out 3-0 on five hits.

Browns Whip Tribe

Cleveland's collapse was another scalp to the credit of the St. Louis Browns, who have made life miserable for every club in the first division. The Tigers met the same fate at Chicago. Julius Solters broke up the first game with a single in the eighth for a 2-1 decision. Rigney shut them out 4-0 in the second game with just two hits.

The most astounding pitching duel of the day, however, was a 13-inning struggle between old Lefty Grove of the Boston Red Sox and young Sid Hudson of the Washington Senators. Youth finally prevailed when rookie Jack Sanford singled across a run in the 13th to win 1-0 for Washington. The Senators won the second game 5-4 in six innings.

Derringer Gets 18th

Paul Derringer got his 18th victory by holding the St. Louis Cardinals to five hits as the Cincinnati Reds captured the first game of their doubleheader 2-1. The Cards managed to hang onto third place by taking the nightcap 7-4.

The Boston Bees squeezed out a 7-6 verdict over the Brooklyn Dodgers in an 11-inning first game, but Brooklyn bagged the second 6-2.

The Pittsburgh Pirates whipped the Chicago Cubs 5-2 for Rip Sewell's 13th triumph, but lost the nightcap 7-1.

The Phillies won 11-2 and 6-5 from the New York Giants.

Yankee Bogeyman Bothers Indians After Double Loss

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Sept. 3 — The Yankee bogeymen troubled the Cleveland Indians' day of rest today as they tried to forget he Labor day double licking administered here by the St. Louis "spoilers."

The Tribesmen face a three-game series at Detroit starting tomorrow but with plenty of over-the-shoulder glances New York way, because the Yanks and the Tigers now are both within three and a half games of the leaders.

In fact New York is actually ahead of Detroit by a fraction of a percentage point following the Labor day proceedings which saw the Tigers whipped twice while the Yanks split a double header.

After the Cleveland-St. Louis double header the crowd of 52,491 fans trudged home with the sad expressions of a refugee band, for their favorites were on the short end of a 2-to-1 and 3-to-0 scores.

Victors in the tight pitchers' battles were Vernon Kennedy and Elden Auker, ever thorns in the Indians' sides. Mel Harder and Johnny Allen have seldom pitched better games for Cleveland but, as Allen said, "You can't win without runs." Kennedy got three of the six hits Mel Harder gave out.

In the second game Auker let the Tribe have only one hit in six innings. The Indians threatened in the seventh and eighth but were tagged out at the plate both times.

Allen shut out the Browns with four hits through eight innings but they broke loose in the ninth.

"One bad pitch cost me that game," said Johnny Allen. "In the ninth I was getting Joe Grace on a change of pace. But a pitch broke inside and he tagged it for his triple. My arm felt better than it has any time this season."

Bob Feller and Schoolboy Rowe are scheduled to open the Detroit series. Al Smith and Tommy Bridges are to be Thursday's opponents. Mel Harder and Buck Newsom probably will wind up the series.

Field Narrows In County Golf Meet

The county golf tournament, being held at Marion Country club, narrowed down to four golfers in each of three flights as quarter-final matches were completed over the week-end. John Rife, defending champion, was among the favorites surviving in the championship flight.

Rife displayed the same form with which he snared the tourney last year as he won easily from John Peacock, 7-6. He fired a two over par 76 for the 18 holes while his opponent was taking 84 strokes. In the first round Rife downed Howard Henry 1 up and Peacock won from Leo Groll, 2-1.

Owens Is Winner

Bob Owens and Bud Baker tangled in the closest match thus far in the tournament with the former emerging on top, 1 up, after 19 holes. Owens, recently crowned Marion Country club champion gained a two up lead at the end of the first nine holes by carding a two under par, 35, to Baker's regulation 37. He stretched it to three up by taking the eleventh hole with a par four to his opponent's six. Baker evened the count as he fired birdies on the twelfth and fifteenth holes and copped the sixteenth with a bogey. With the match square and two holes to go they both shot par four's on the seventeenth and bogey fives on the eighteenth.

Both players had better than 250 yards on drives off the nineteenth tee. Owens' pulled his second to the rough about 40 feet from the green while Baker was several yards to the left of the green. Owens pitched first and his ball stopped 25 feet from the pin and Baker's approach came to rest 12 feet from the hole. After making a careful study of his putt, Owens stroked on a direct line to the cup for a birdie four. With everything resting on the outcome of his putt, Baker's ball rimmed the cup, to give the match to Owens. The latter had a 41 on the second nine giving him a 76 total. Baker carded a 40 for a 77. In the first round Owens turned back Henry Roberts Jr., 2-1 while Baker won over Frank Powers, 7-6.

Petrich Downs Darnell

Herb Petrich fired a 78 to G. E. Darnell's 81 to oust the latter, 3-2. In the first round Petrich defeated Ben Wiant Jr., 6-5 and Darnell brushed by Bob Wilson, 3-1.

A one under par, 73, gave Jack Jennings a 5-4 victory over Bud Stull, who toured the course in 79 blows. Jennings downed John Dugan, 5-4 in the first round, while Stull was whipping L. E. Oberlander, 3-2. Stull was one of the favorites in the tournament as his qualifying round of 75 made him medalist and gave him the top spot of the second bracket.

This week Rife will meet Petrich in the semi-finals of the first bracket and Owens and Jennings will square off in the second. The winners of these two matches will tee off in the 36-hole final which probably will be played Sunday, Sept. 15.

Judge H. S. Young continued to hold the top spot in the first bracket of the second flight as he defeated Jack Hedges, 5-4. Neil Sharkey, last year's winner in this group, won over Dr. H. R. Finney, 7-6, Warren Rowley Jr. downed Rev. Father J. A. Favret, 7-6, and Sherman Halderman ousted E. W. Fox, 1 up after 19 holes.

In the third flight, Roger Loveless turned back R. W. Disbennett, 4-2, George Stafford defeated Roy Newell, 1 up, James Woods Jr. won by default from Bill Thomas and Bob Bush won over Dr. R. E. Eicher 1 up.

This week's matches will pit Judge H. S. Young against Sharkey and Halderman against Rowley in the second flight while Loveless will tangle with Stafford and Woods will meet Bush in the third.

Nelson Wins

Snead in 36-H
Toledoan Triumphs in P. G

By The Associated Press

HERSHEY, Pa., Sept. 3—Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., today joined the select handful of professional golfers who have won both the medal and the match play championships of the United States and once again the triumph was at the expense of Sam Snead, the luckless.

Nelson, open king in 1939, won the P. G. A. title for the first time yesterday. He defeated Snead by one hole in a rousing 36-hole final that wound up in a blaze of brilliant shots.

Snead is still wondering how he lost this one. The West Virginia slugger has dropped a lot of big tournaments before by folding up at critical moments but this time it was different.

Sammy threw a final round 68, five under par, at Nelson and it didn't do him any good. Said Sam sadly:

"I don't know what I have to do to crash in there. I guess I'll just never win a big one."

Nelson simply outplayed Snead at the important time. He had the championship almost on ice for a time, hovering around a two or three hole advantage, and then in the home stretch got caught in Snead's final and gallant try.

—AND, IF YOU WON'T THINK ME FORWARD, I WOULD LIKE TO PAY HOMAGE TO YOUR GREAT BEAUTY—HOW MAGNIFICENTLY DOES YOUR LOVELY NECK SET OFF THOSE JEWELS!
FLATTERER!
GEE, THESE PEARLS ARE NATURAL ONES! AND THE ICE— IT'S NOT PASTE, EITHER!
ISN'T IT RATHER DANGEROUS TO KEEP SO MANY VALUABLES IN THE HOUSE, DEAR MRS. FLEECER?
